Senate Group Gets Appeal of Business for Tax Reduction

Also Asked for Respite From Additional Regulations

REPORT IS PLANNED

U. S. Chamber of Commerce Head Sees 'Lack of Confidence'

Washington — (AP) — A senate committee studying the relation of unemployment to the recession received today a final appeal from organized business for lower taxes and a respite from new regulations of trade and industry.

As experts began the task of sifting thousands of words spoken by leaders of industry, labor and government during three weeks of hearings, President George H. Davis of the United States Chamber of Commerce wrote the committee: "The real cause of the present recession is due to lack of confidence in the future, caused cumulatively by the passage of laws culminating in the undistributed profits tax and the threat of the wages-and-hours bill."

LAUDS PEACE PLAN

Eau Claire — (AP) — The legislative program of the American Legion was stressed by Daniel J. Doherty, Woburn, Mass., national commander, in an address yesterday before legionnaires and other guests at the national commanders' luncheon, closing feature of the midwinter conference.

Doherty said that one of the most prolific causes of war is greed and that when profit is taken out of war, "we shall have gone a long way toward preventing war."

He said the legion is seeking to attain this end by means of its proposed universal service legislation now before congress.

New Commerce Group Named For Wisconsin

Governor Appoints 17 Business Men to Advisory Council

8 MORE REQUIRED

New Department Created During Special Legislative Term

Madison — (AP) — Governor LaFollette's choice of 17 Wisconsin business men on the advisory council to head the new state department of commerce was announced today by the executive office.

The department was created by the special session of the 1937 legislature to assist industry and commerce. The advisory council will have 25 members. Governor LaFollette said he would name eight others in the near future.

List of Appointees
Those appointed today follow: Joseph Conroy, Green Bay, paper manufacturer; D. C. Everest, Wausau, paper manufacturer; Theodore Friedlander, Milwaukee, hosiery manufacturer; E. M. Hale, Eau Claire, book publisher; Herbert F. Johnson, Jr., Racine, paint and wax business; Ralph Kingsley, Kenosha, newspaper publisher; William M. Maunth, Fond du Lac, manufacturer.

Otto Mooser, Port Washington, furniture manufacturer; H. L. Nunn, Milwaukee, shoe manufacturer; Kenneth S. Parker, Janesville, pen manufacturer; Frank Pierce, Medford, highway contractor; T. J. Roth, Superior, department store owner; Frank Sisson, La Crosse, wholesale business; George S. Whyte, Kenosha, manufacturer; A. C. Boiz, Madison, packing plant manager.

Herman L. Ekern, Madison, insurance attorney and former attorney general; Dr. C. E. Albright, Milwaukee, life insurance agent.

50 Names Submitted

The appointees were selected by the governor from a list of 50 names submitted by state industrial leaders.

With the approval of the council a director will be appointed to have charge of the department, which received an appropriation of $75,000.

While the main function of the department is to encourage industrial development, Governor LaFollette recently said he hoped it would counter-act the impression that Wisconsin is hostile to business and that it would assist more in the development of the industries of the state now has.

Actress Is Found Dead in Auto on Long Island Estate

New York — (AP) — Police at the Second Nassau station said today that Rosamond Pinchot, daughter of Amos Pinchot, and niece of former Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania had been found dead in an automobile at the estate of Harry Alexandre, Old Brookville, Long Island.

Miss Pinchot, for years a prominent actress on Broadway, appeared to have died, said the police, of automobile exhaust fumes.

She was identified, they added, by servants at the Alexandre estate.

The death of the tall, golden-haired actress was listed as a suicide in an official report filed with the Nassau county police by deputy Medical Examiner Lewis F. Ellmore.

Coalitionists in Optimistic Mood At Stevens Point

Fox River Valley Leaders Think This Area Will Set Fast Pace

BY JOHN W. WYNGAARD
Post-Crescent Staff Correspondent
Stevens Point — Permanent officers chosen, a declaration of principles drafted and adopted, and the first stages of state-wide organization completed, a little band of hopeful men and women — the anti-LaFollette fusion committee — today looked forward to carrying its fight for "honest and democratic" government into every corner of the state through district, county and precinct committees and "grass roots" caucuses of the old town hall variety.

The second state meeting of the leaders of the anti-LaFollette coalition committee was held here over the weekend. Lacking the noisiness of other political meetings, delegates numbering 50 out of a total executive committee of 70, and all of them sober and serious, indicated that the coalition organization, which to date has largely consisted of paper plans and talk, will become a factor in the 1938 campaigns.

The meeting completed the executive committee slate, including Republicans and Democrats from every congressional district and

Protest Fails To Keep Milton Out of Senate

League Charges Referred to Committee

SUCCEEDS MOORE

Chairman George Gets 'Numerous Letters Of Protest'

Washington — (AP) — John Milton took his oath today as senator from New Jersey, despite a protest against his seating from Labor's Non-Partisan League.

While the new Democratic senator was signing the senate register, Vice President Garner announced that he was referring to the elections committee protests filed against Milton by the Non-Partisan League and others.

The new senator was sworn in by Garner before galleries crowded with spectators and friends. He was appointed to succeed Henry A. Moore, who resigned after he was elected governor.

After Garner had referred the Non-Partisan League's protest to the elections committee, chairman George (D-Ga.), of that committee said he had received "numerous letters and protests" to the appointment of Milton.

Garner said these also would be referred to the elections committee.

The Non-Partisan League's protest asked the senate to refuse to seat Milton on the grounds he owed his appointment to a "corrupt political machine" and was personally unfit to hold the office.

Two officers of the league said in a complaint that Milton was named to the senate because of an alliance with "a corrupt political machine which has consistently violated the election laws of the state of New Jersey... which has looted the public Treasury and which has endorsed a reign of virtual dictatorship."

Snow Slows Highway Travel; Floods Strike Southern Part of State

Many Telephone and Power Lines Reported Broken

BUSES ARE DELAYED

Beloit Police Use Boats To Rescue 50 Families

By the Associated Press
Beloit police manned boats to rescue nearly 50 families from their flood-menaced homes today when the Rock river and Turtle creek overflowed their banks. The rescue took place in the vicinity of Race and Third streets in Beloit.

The perilous situation arose after the rivers were swollen by nearly two inches of rainfall that was general throughout the southern half of Wisconsin. Janesville also was hard hit by floods.

Wire communication in the northern sector of Wisconsin and upper Michigan was badly disrupted today and highway travel stalled on many county highways and slowed on the arterial routes by a heavy fall of wet-slick snow.

Telephone and power line crews fought their way through 6 to 8 inches of snow in some parts of the state north of Rhineland, Antigo and Green Bay to repair breaks in the service caused by falling branches and trees as well as lines parted by the weight of the clinging snow.

Southern Wisconsin as far north as the Fox river valley and Sheboygan felt the counterpart of the storm in a 3-inch rainfall which began last night and continued today. Prevented from entering the frozen ground, the accumulating drainage water today rose to near flood levels in some southern state communities, notably Janesville, where one section of the city was under water.

Many Roads Blocked

Across the northern half of the state snow, wet and sticky in quality, fell last night and today to a depth ranging from 2 to 6 inches. Although state and county snow removal equipment kept main arterials open, it was reported many county highways were blocked today and power companies had full crews out repairing damaged lines which fell under the weight of the heavy snow. The same crews were

Attorney General Plans Craft Probe In Florence County

Madison — (AP) — Attorney General O. S. Loomis announced today he will soon name a member of his staff to investigate charges of graft and corruption in Florence county.

Loomis said Governor LaFollette turned over to him a letter written by Ray Rapp, state beverage tax inspector, charging that keepers of gambling and other houses in the county are paying for protection.

"Mr. Rapp sets forth extremely serious charges against certain county officials in Florence county," the governor said in a letter to the attorney general. "I will appreciate it if you will arrange to make a prompt and thorough investigation and report your findings and recommendations to me."

Winter's Worst Storm Sweeps Appleton, Vicinity

COLD WAVE COMING

Strong North Winds Forecast for Tonight, Tuesday

Thick, soggy snow that followed last night's rain piled a 7-inch layer on Appleton and vicinity by 1 o'clock this afternoon, damaged power lines, and impeded traffic.

Citizens dug cars out of wet banks or just let them stand and went on foot, buses were behind schedule, and snow-laden limbs cracked, snapping and entangling wires, as the winter's worst storm swept the city and countryside.

Forecast of a severe cold wave tonight and tomorrow with strong north winds brought fears of even more damage to power lines and worse traffic conditions.

All available workmen and snow removal equipment were marshaled by city and county today to fight against the heavy storm that dappled buildings with patches of damp snow, almost buried parked cars and delayed buses for over a half-hour.

There are having plenty of trouble right now," Wisconsin Michigan Power company official said, "and if the storm doesn't stop, we're expecting a lot more."

Hundreds Forced To Leave Homes As Waters Rise

Ice Keeps Streams From Carrying Away Heavy Rainfall

Rockford, Ill. — (AP) — A rain and snow storm which swept northern Illinois last night and today took at least one life, flooded several sections and drove more than 500 families from their homes. One person was reported missing in the ice dotted Rock river and two others were rescued from Elkhorn creek when their boat overturned.

Six-year-old Eddie Proctor of Amboy, Ill., drowned in the swift current of an ordinarily dry run as he walked to school. Two companions who were fording the stream reached safety.

A man doing rescue work in Rockford was reported lost, but details were incomplete.

Farmhands Admit Part in Robbery

Third Suspect Hunted in Tavern Holdup-Slaying At Port Washington

Hastings, Mich. — (AP) — Sheriff Jay Blakney said today two Barry county farmhands, Lawrence Sargent, 26, and Fred May, 24, had confessed complicity in a Port Washington, Wis., tavern holdup which ended in a bartender's fatal shooting.

The sheriff said the men, arrested here Saturday, had admitted participating in the holdup of a week ago after two witnesses brought here from Port Washington had identified them. A third man is being sought.

Three robbers got $25 in the holdup. Alex Baumgarten, 47, the bartender, was shot dead. Sheriff Blakney did not say whether either of the two men held had admitted the actual shooting.

Sheriff Ben F. Runkle of Wisconsin said Sargent and May had waived extradition and he would return them to Port Washington today. Sheriff Runkle, in company with Undersheriff Roland Schaeffer and Deputy Frank Idenburg, brought the witnesses here.

WARRANTS ISSUED

Port Washington, Wis. — District Attorney Charles L. Larson said today he had issued warrants charging Fred May, 24, with the murder of Alex Baumgarten, 47, tavernkeeper, and Lawrence Sargent, 26, with being an accessory before the fact.

Larson said Prosecutor A. D. McDonald at Hastings, Mich., told him today both men had confessed to participation in the fatal shooting and expressed willingness to waive extradition.

(At Hastings McDonald said a technicality in Michigan law required that principles in a waiver proceeding must appear and express their wish formally before a court of record. He said May and Sargent would so appear before Probate Judge Stuart Clement today. McDonald said the men then would be returned to Port Washington where the warrants could be served.)

LaFollette Counsel Resigns His Position

Madison — (AP) — Gordon Sinykin, 27, legal counsel to Governor LaFollette for the last three years, will resign, effective Feb. 1, to join the Madison law firm of Roberts, Roe and Bordinan. It was announced today. Sinykin has been secretary to the governor since 1935 and before that time practiced law with the old firm of LaFollette, Rogers and Roberts.

Charles Kulnick Dies in Florida

Head of Brewing Companies Had Been in Ill Health Several Months

Menasha — Charles Kulnick, 67, president of the Walter Brothers brewery, Menasha, died Sunday at Vero Beach, Fla., where he had gone to spend the winter. He was also president of the Berlin Brewing company, Berlin, and was identified with the brewery industry at Berlin, Menasha, Manitowoc, and Sheboygan since 1888.

He had been in failing health for several months. He began his business career with the old Schreihafer concern at Manitowoc but left to establish his own brewery in Berlin in 1910 he returned to Manitowoc to become general manager of the Schreihafer concern.

He held controlling interests in the Menasha and Berlin plants, retiring from active business last June because of ill health. While living in Berlin he served two terms as mayor. He was a director of the Manitowoc National bank and was a member of the Eagles and the Elks.

Survivors are the widow, two daughters, Mrs. Thomas Savage of Manitowoc and Mrs. Paul Serff of Detroit, and two sons, Victor and Norman, both of Menasha. Funeral services will be held Thursday morning at Manitowoc.

2 U. S. Brigades are Reported 'Destroyed'

Hendaye, France — (AP) — Official insurgent dispatches from Salamanca said today two American volunteer brigades — Lincoln and Washington — were "destroyed" in Saturday's fighting on the Teruel front.

(These American units have been engaged for months in the Spanish civil war, fighting for the Spanish government with other international volunteer forces. There have been references to their use as shock troops.)

The insurgents also said a third international brigade, the "Walter brigade," was "decimated."

Doubt Missing Vessel Ever Will Be Found

St. James, Beaver Island, Mich. — (AP) — Coast guards of the Beaver Island station said today that they did not believe the fishing tug, Walter J. and its crew of three men ever would be found.

The tug, which left St. Ignace for Racine, Wis., Dec. 10, has been sought in these waters during the last week. Low visibility and jagged ice fields have hampered searches.

Federal Agents Round Out Case Against Kidnaper

Hop to Send Confessed Killer of Two to Electric Chair

Chicago — (AP) — John Henry Seadlund, confessed kidnaper-slayer of Charles S. Ross, sat chained to the bars of a skyscraper cell today while federal agents forged the last links in the chain of evidence they hoped will send the former 27-year-old lumberjack to the electric chair.

Federal prosecutors indicated they would ask the grand jury scheduled to convene today, to indict Seadlund under the Lindbergh kidnap law.

Justice department officials announced in Washington the confessed kidnaper had once contemplated plans to abduct two major league baseball stars.

The Washington officials said Seadlund, alias Peter Anders, had dropped abortive plans to seize Jerome "Dizzy" Dean, pitcher for the St. Louis Cardinals, and an unnamed member of the New York Yankees' team. They said he had hoped to realize $50,000 ransom for each, but eventually abandoned the plans.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the federal bureau of investigation, said Seadlund, who also was known as Peter Anders, had confessed kidnapping Ross on Sept. 25, and later shooting and killing him and James Atwood Gray, the swarthy logger's accomplice in the crime. Their bodies were found in a crude, wooded cave in the Wisconsin north woods.

Expect Guilty Plea

The Lindbergh law provides the death penalty if the victim had not been liberated unharmed. Lawyers said that since Seadlund made a complete confession and led federal agents to the bodies and to his cached ransom he would likely plead guilty in the remote hope of evading the death sentence.

Seadlund, who, Hoover said, was launched on his crime career by Tommy Carroll, Dillinger gangster slain, was held in a lockup in the nineteenth floor offices of the federal bureau of investigation. Five agents stood guard. He was brought to Chicago yesterday night by plane from St. Paul where the agents spent several days in a speedy cleanup of the case.

Shortly after the party's arrival, Hoover, who returned to Washington yesterday, told reporters about Seadlund's life.

Born in Minnesota

"He was born at Ironton, Minn.," Hoover said, "had a high school education, but became a woodsman and hunter when he grew up."

"During a hunting trip he met Carroll, who was hiding in the north of here."

STUDENT KILLED

Richland Center, Wis. — (AP) — Harold Hill, 16, high school student here, was killed instantly yesterday when his car overturned on Highway U. S. 14, a short distance west of here.

Committee Backs Reed Nomination

Unanimous Vote by Members Attending Brief Executive Session

Washington — (AP) — The senate judiciary committee unanimously approved today the nomination of Stanley F. Reed to the supreme court.

Members said no objections to the nominee, now solicitor general, were made, and the subcommittee's favorable report, also unanimous, was ordered forwarded to the senate.

Resort to Forced Feeding in Effort To Save Life of Tennessee Pastor

Memphis, Tenn. — (AP) — Israel Harding, 52, who had fasted for 21 days to save his life today, with physicians resorting to forced feeding to restore strength to his wasted body.

They said they considered his condition "grave" but not hopeless after 22 days of absolute abstinence from food, and that three months might be required to restore him physically.

The 47-year-old, ousted dean of St. Mary's Episcopal cathedral was rushed to the hospital last night after he had fallen into what physicians described as a "deep sleep."

Sweetened liquids were forced into his dehydrated body and intravenous feeding was to be started as soon as his condition permitted. Meanwhile, he was kept in seclusion under sedatives.

Hal Buchanan, attorney and a member of the cathedral chapter, visited the former dean last night and said he talked "intelligently" but expressed opposition to the forced feeding that ended the long

CIO Turned Down As Group Member Of Badger Party

Proposal Rejected by Single Vote at Madison Meeting

Madison.—(P)—By a one vote margin the Wisconsin Federation of Labor brought about defeat yesterday of the proposal to allow its rival, the Committee for Industrial Organization, blanket membership in the Farmer-Labor-Progressive Federation.

Delegates voted 27 to 26 at the close of a two-day convocation to continue memberships exclusively on an individual basis after Henry Ohl, Jr., of Milwaukee, A. F. of L. president, threatened withdrawal of his forces if the CIO was to be taken in as a group.

Ohl contended the A. F. of L. constitution makes it impossible for that organization to join any political movement as a body.

With the group affiliation proposal shelved apparently for a year, the A. F. of L. will remain in control of the labor forces of the federation.

Progressive leaders wondered what the CIO would do next. Some of its members declared they would push a Wisconsin organization, the Labor Non-Partisan League, the national CIO party, but leaders expressed the hope there would be no split over Progressive candidates in this year's elections.

Pleas Futile
Assemblyman Emil Costello, state CIO chairman, and James DeWitt, state vice president, pleaded for adoption of the unit affiliation plan.

They protested that under the present setup the nine members of the federation's executive board sit in convention as ex-officio delegates.

Defeated on its original proposal the CIO faction offered a resolution for a state nominating convention in March apparently to renew the issue at that time but this also was turned down.

The federation decided, on motion of Thomas Duncan, chief adviser to Governor LaFollette, to hold its state convention between May 15 and June 1. The convention will endorse a slate of state candidates.

Senate Possibilities
There was much unofficial talk among the delegates about possible candidates to oppose reelection of United States Senator F. Ryan Duffy. Those mentioned included Mayor Dan Hoan of Milwaukee, Congressman Gerald Billeau of Wausau and Thomas Amle of Elkhorn.

Assemblyman Paul Alfano of Pease and Kenneth Hones of Colfax, president of the Farmers' Equity union.

The federation criticized the state supreme court for its decision invalidating the Wisconsin Development authority and set up a committee to study the court's record, along with those of Federal Judge F. A. Geiger, Milwaukee, and Circuit Judge A. C. Hopmann, Madison.

Members of the committee are: Duncan, Assemblyman Andrew J. Biemiller and William Quick, both of Milwaukee.

Japs Draft Reply To New Protests From Washington

Latest Notes Due to Nipponese Entering American Nanking Property

Tokio.—(P)—The Japanese foreign office spokesman said today a written answer was expected in a few days to United States protests against Japanese soldiers entering American property in Nanking.

The spokesman said "some necessary steps already have been taken by Japanese authorities on the spot, on instructions from the Japanese government."

"Following investigation, if more steps are deemed necessary, then they will be taken," he said.

He did not specify what "steps" have been taken thus far to remedy the situation in the captured city, which formerly was the capital of China.

(The state department in Washington said yesterday that Joseph C. Grew, American ambassador in Tokio, reported the Japanese war department had told military authorities at Shanghai and Nanking to refrain from irregular entry of American property.)

(The United States has made "emphatic representations" to Japan, charging that Japanese soldiers entering American property in Nanking 15 times in three days and took away 10 Chinese women refugees, as well as property.)

Shanghai.—(P)—Japanese airplanes today bombed defenses of Su-chow, center of Chinese resistance along the main east-west railway, the Lughai.

Japanese spokesmen said locomotive sheds, freight trains and nearby troop barracks were destroyed in the attack.

Japanese columns pushing toward the city from the north and south fought indecisive engagements.

A few miles to the south and southeast of Shanghai Japanese infantry and air attacks were credited by the spokesmen as cleaning out all Chinese guerrilla opposition in Pootung.

A force of about 1,000 Chinese had clung to barricades in Pootung across the Whangpoo river from Shanghai, challenging complete Japanese occupation of the Shanghai area.

Outer Mongolia Active
(At Peiping, there were new reports of activities of troops of Outer Mongolia in western Suiyuan province. Outer Mongolian troops were said to be within a few miles of Paotow, railroad of the line to Peiping occupied by Japanese garrisons.)

(North China travelers said Japanese troops were distributed thinly along railways which Chinese cross at will.)

Chinese asserted their troops had attacked Wuhu, Yangtze river port 60 miles upstream from Nanking and Japanese admitted Chinese had conducted air raids near Wuhu but said little damage resulted.

Ban Removal of Goods
Japanese officials in Shanghai placed a prohibition order on removal of goods from Hongkew and Yangtze areas under the International Settlement which have been occupied by Japanese since hostilities started.

A number of "abuses" including transfer of ownership from Chinese to foreigners, prompted the order, the Japanese said.

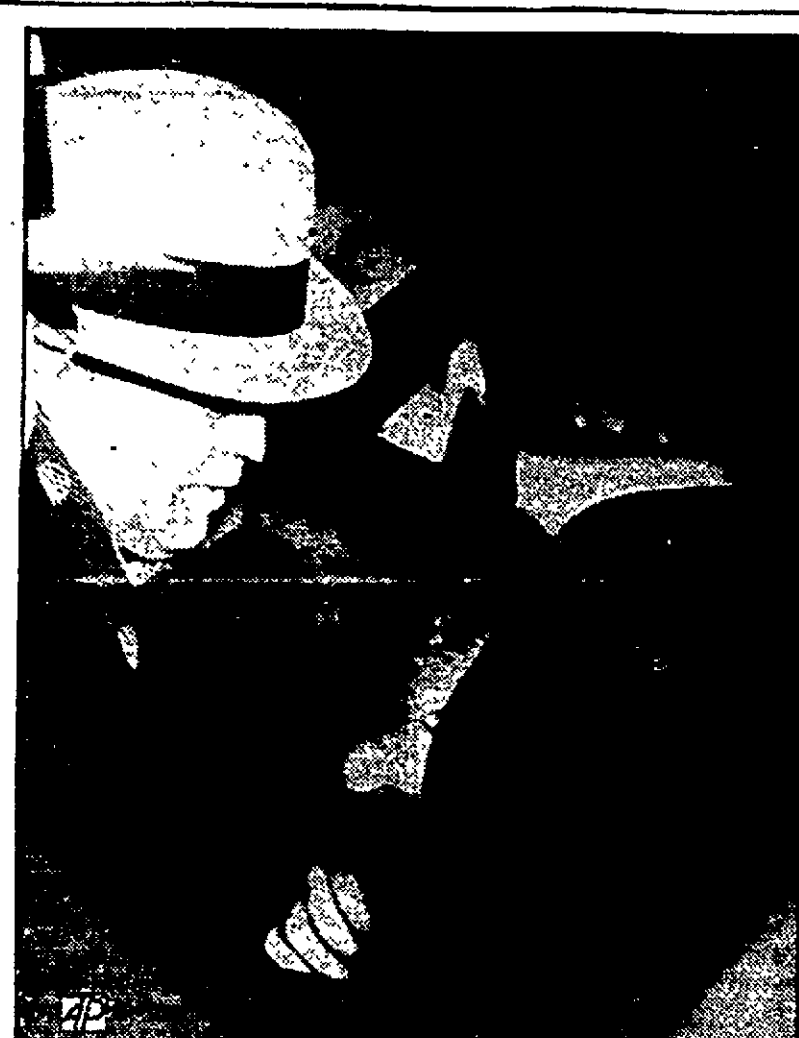

Four cases in which Japanese soldiers searched British property for "bad elements" were reported.

Japanese reports from Weihaiwei, on the northern coast of the Shantung peninsula, said Chinese machines there had mutinied.

A Reuters (British news agency) dispatch from Hankow, temporary Chinese capital, reported the soviet embassy there has been destroyed by fire. An explosion was said to have occurred before flames burned out the building.

a sprinkling of the Coughlin-Lemke Union party leaders chose a state campaign committee of 10 members, delegated a group to look after the solicitation of funds, and chose officers who will serve for 1938.

Officers are James Kerwin, Milwaukee Democrat who helped to organize the coalition committee, Joseph F. Walsh, Potosi, Grant county farmer, 1938 Wisconsin standard-bearer of the Union party and head of what remains of Father Coughlin's state organization, secretary; Joseph Seftenberg, old-time Republican leader from Oshkosh, now Winnebago county Republican chairman, treasurer.

Seftenberg was directed to request the help of other coalition advocates in the Fox river valley to organize a finance committee which will begin immediately to gather funds for the 1938 campaign, which, according to plans, will see a coalition ticket in the field against the LaFollette slate. Discussion on the floor indicated that state industrialists and anti-LaFollette business groups will be solicited for campaign contributions.

Speakers at the meeting declared angrily that rumors have been spread that the coalition organization represents the "money bags and the predatory corporations." In reality, they said, the coalition committee represents the rank and file of conservative voters and at present has little or no financial backing.

Cautious Platform
The statement of principles adopted by the delegates presented nothing very exciting, and spoke only in generalities. It was admitted. Authors of the statement, however, explained that in beginning an early campaign and organizing a brand new political movement—that it is a new party is denied—they prefer to be cautious. The coalition platform, on which anti-LaFollette candidates will bid for office this fall, will have more punch, they promised.

After a denunciation of "legislative gagging and political bribery" of the present state administration, and a declaration that "the present state administration has prevented us that the laboring man, the farmer and the small business man are being used as tools for the advancement of those in control of the state," the statement outlined a four-point general program.

1. The independent functioning of the executive and legislative branches of the government.

2. Lower government costs and its resulting corollary—lower taxes.

3. The decentralization of the power of the state government to the benefit of the local units.

4. The safeguarding of the rights of labor in industry, and the improving of the standard of living of the laboring man, and the protecting of the laboring man from exploitation by professional labor racketeers.

To attain these objectives, the coalitionists "invite all citizens of Wisconsin to support this coalition movement of the rank and file as an instrument for securing sane, honest, representative government."

County Caucus
Probably the most significant action of the meeting here Saturday was the decision for thorough county organization, and nominating caucuses in every county, a plan submitted by W. D. Carroll of Prairie du Chien, former state senate Democratic leader, sometimes mentioned as a coalition candidate for high office this year.

By these nominations the executive committee of 70 will be guided in forming its official slate at the next state-wide meeting, scheduled on or before July 1.

Observers noted that the coalition movement is clearly a rank and file movement. Although most of the committee members are not political amateurs, being either former office holders or county and local party captains, political figures of state-wide influence are conspicuously absent.

This some delegates explained can be attributed to the "unwillingness of old party leaders to let go of their opportunities for self-aggrandizement." In the words of Robert Steine, Milwaukee leader, they are "anxiously watching this movement, but they are afraid to stick out their necks just now."

Predict Heavy Vote
Steine also observed that for the first time in many years, through the efforts of the new fusion group, Governor LaFollette has been put on the defensive. "We have aroused the fear of the Progressives, for for the home owner, farmer and small business man."

Following Rohan's talk, Attorney Hellermann will address the assembly on highway safety. The Milwaukee attorney drafted the driver's license law which was introduced at the last session of the state legislature. He has been prominent in auto safety campaigns in Milwaukee, a city nationally recognized for its accomplishments in the field.

Driving School Is Topic for Meeting Of Forum Tonight

Hellermann, Milwaukee Safety Leader, Principal Speaker

Leaders of the Appleton Forum, representatives of organizations in city and county, and other citizens interested in promoting highway safety will talk over the proposal to establish a driving school in Outagamie county at the first forum meeting at 7:30 tonight in the vocational school auditorium.

The discussion on the driving school will follow the appearance of several speakers headed by Attorney A. K. Hellermann, Milwaukee, chairman of the legislative committee of the Wisconsin Highway Safety council.

Sergeant Carl Radtke, head of the police traffic squad, and another member of the police force will conduct a question and answer forum on important phases of traffic problems, using material prepared by the state safety council.

The Rev. John B. Hanna will be chairman for tonight's forum. He will open the meeting with a synoptic talk on the history of the national safety movement and the work being done by the National Council of Safety. Ben J. Rohan, superintendent of schools, will speak on a driving school for high school students.

Following Rohan's talk, Attorney Hellermann will address the assembly on highway safety. The Milwaukee attorney drafted the driver's license law which was introduced at the last session of the state legislature. He has been prominent in auto safety campaigns in Milwaukee, a city nationally recognized for its accomplishments in the field.

Sergeant Radtke will conduct his share of the program and the meeting will then be thrown open to the discussion on the county driving school.

Jaces to Award Annual Service Medal Tonight
The Appleton Junior Chamber of Commerce will make its annual service award at a 6:30 banquet tonight at the Conway hotel.

The medal will go to the young man under 35 years of age who has been of the greatest service to the city during the last year. Mayor Goodland, Jr., chairman of the committee which annually selects the winner, will make the presentation.

Judge Fred V. Heinemann will be principal speaker at tonight's banquet. Harry Hoefel, president of the jaces, will be toastmaster.

West DePere Autoist Fined for Speeding
Sam Davis, West DePere, pleaded guilty of speeding and was fined $10 and costs by Judge Thomas H. Ryan in municipal court this morning. Davis was arrested about 11 o'clock last night by city police on E. Wisconsin avenue.

This is now a genuinely democratic, a rank and file movement in every sense of the word."

Fox River Valley delegates at the meeting predicted optimistically that their section will lead the state in coalition votes after their committee start functioning. Senator E. F. Brunette of Green Bay, former Democratic stalwart in the state senate, declared that the state and especially his section is getting tired of LaFollette rule. And the governor's present administration, he believes, will provide plenty of ammunition for LaFollette's opponents come November.

Elmer R. Honkamp, Appleton, head of the Outagamie county Republican committee, Dr. F. M. Corbett, Menasha, Winnebago county Democratic chairman, and A. D. Strout of Manitowoc, leader of the Manitowoc county Democratic organization, declared confidently that the idea will catch on, especially with the benefit of an early beginning.

Orville Hogner of Appleton, chairman of the Republicans in the Eighth congressional district, attended the meeting as an observer for the state Republican organization, although the state organization is strenuously opposed at present to an open and above-board coalition attempt.

Today and Tomorrow

BY WALTER LIPPMAN

The Debate About American Armament

In addition to the regular bill for construction now before congress, the president, it is generally understood, will shortly ask for some quite considerable increase in the strength of the navy. He has undoubtedly come reluctantly to this decision after being forced to recognize that in Europe and Asia—from Spain to Shanghai—the prospects of peace have grown so much worse at so many points that a reasonable statesman cannot ignore the danger. Most certainly Mr. Roosevelt would do anything he could to persuade the world to disarm and settle down in peace. But it is evident that the world is not yet ready to be persuaded. And so, with all sorts of unpredictable possibilities confronting him, the president must have concluded that the one thing he could not neglect was to make this country stronger.

His decision will precipitate a tense and momentous debate, one which will arouse much passion, one which will compel every citizen to make a difficult and fateful choice. For the underlying question which will be debated in congress and in the newspapers and on public platforms is one of which it may genuinely be said that there is profound nothing to be decided. So when a man makes his choice, he is staking perhaps his own life, perhaps the lives of multitudes, on his judgment of an issue about which complete certainty is impossible.

Differences Arise From Honest Beliefs
In a discussion of this high character the only useful thing to do is to consider the strongest case for each side. Ignoring the petty arguments and accusations which are the small change of popular debate, the only thing to be decided is whether the president has been seduced by the munitions makers, the international bankers, the militarists and the concession hunters. He has not been. Nothing is to be learned by charging that the opposition consists of cowards who wish to haul down the flag and take to a policy of scuttling and run. They are not cowards, and so far as the moral virtues are concerned a pacifist and a conscientious objector may well be a man of exceptional moral courage and of indisputable patriotism.

The two sides in this debate may reasonably be credited with equal courage and equal patriotism. Their differences are vital. Yet they arise from equally honest but differing estimates of the dangers which the nation has to face.

Orderly International Relations at Stake
The essential issue can be studied concretely by considering the facts submitted to the senate by Secretary Hull in response to a resolution asking him to define American interests in China. Mr. Hull replied that at the beginning of hostilities, that is in August, there were about 10,000 American residents in China, and that by November 4,000 had been evacuated; that there were not quite 4,000 soldiers and marines stationed in China, and there were about thirteen war vessels in Chinese waters. He said further that American investments in China were about $132,000,000, besides some $40,000,000 of defaulted bonds, some $25,000,000 of property owned by Americans resident in China and about $40,000,000 of property belonging to American missionary and charitable organizations.

Relatively speaking, all of this does not represent a very great tangible stake. Commenting on it, Mr. Hull went on to say that "the interest and concern of the United States in the Far Eastern situation, in the European situation, and in situations of this continent are not measured by the number of American citizens residing in a particular country at a particular moment, nor by the amount of investment of American citizens there nor by the volume of trade. There is a broader and much more fundamental interest—which is that orderly processes in international relationships be maintained."

In Conception of World
This poses the basic issue of the coming debate. The supporters of the President will say with Secretary Hull that it is a vital American concern to protect American interests abroad, regardless of their value in money, and that this protection can be given only by the prestige of heavy armaments. The opposition will say that the United States has no vital interests outside of its own territorial limits or at least that it has none outside the Western Hemisphere, and that heavy armaments will lead to interventions in foreign quarrels and to useless wars.

Behind these two points of view there will lie a different conception of the world. Those who think with the President and Mr. Hull believe that if respect for lawful processes is not upheld in the outer world, the anarchy will inevitably invade us at home and engulf the whole world. The opposition believes that the United States can remain an island of law and order and liberty no matter what happens elsewhere, and that the prudent policy is to withdraw from all the theaters of trouble and stand firm on our own boundaries.

Gap Between the Two Sides Is Not Great
Such a statement of the issue is somewhat misleading, however, for it implies a greater practical difference between the two sides than in fact exists. We may be certain, for example, that the President and Secretary Hull have no idea of carrying their principles to the point where they would intervene by armed force in Europe and Asia to uphold the abstract processes of law and order. Mr. Hull says most distinctly that he means to apply his principles with "calm reason," that is, to protect American interests without bluster, excitement or ultimata, and by making many allowances.

We may be equally certain that the opposition does not really mean to abandon any and every American interest in the outer world, saying to all foreign governments that they may with impunity inflict any injury they like upon Americans. They do not mean that. They cannot mean that. For if enough injury were done to Americans abroad, the opposition today would surely resent it.

Question Is How to Prevent Gross Injuries
The crucial question, it seems to me, is how best to prevent such gross injuries to Americans abroad that an overwhelming majority of the people would insist upon taking action. The President's view is no doubt that the United States must be sufficiently respected and feared abroad to discourage the perpetrating of such gross outrages as the sinking of the Panay. His view must be that if we attempted to withdraw all Americans from every place where there was trouble, if we abandoned every interest and every right the moment there was danger, we should not make ourselves one bit more secure. On the contrary, we should be putting a premium on the committing of outrages which, after there had been a series of them, the American people would not tolerate.

Certainly the President's policy involves risks. But every policy has risks, and those who think in this matter as the President does believe that to put no restraint whatever on any aggressor in Europe and Asia or on the oceans is to take the greatest risk of all, the risk of inviting such injury to Americans that in the end there would be no remedy short of war.

The policy of arming to enforce a reasonable respect for our rights is risky and entails risks. There is no denying it. But it would seem to be the less dangerous and the more prudent of the two policies in that it attempts to exercise restraint on aggression before too great injuries have been committed, before national pride is too deeply engaged, before popular passion runs high. It is a preventive policy, and while no one can guarantee that it will prevent war, it would seem to offer the better chance.

Over 500 Schools Take Advantage of Courses by Radio

Teaching Program Con- ducted at State-Owned Stations

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison — One of Wisconsin's newest educational ventures, classroom teaching over the air, is steadily becoming more popular and to date has been adopted by more than 500 schools enrolling half a dozen classes of more than 11,000 Wisconsin school students each, sponsors of the Wisconsin School of the Air reported today.

Induced half a dozen years ago, the radio teaching program is conducted by state specialists at the university and prominent grade and secondary school instructors over the state-owned stations WHA in Madison and WLBL in Stevens Point. Broadcasts originate in the Madison studio on the University of Wisconsin campus.

The program of school radio study, which enrolls both the out of the way one room rural school, and the large city high schools in almost every county in the state, is endorsed by influential educational authorities in the state.

State Pays Cost
Present sponsors are the University of Wisconsin, the state department of public instruction, and the Wisconsin Education association. The broadcasts are strictly non-commercial and are provided with state funds.

"Ever since the Wisconsin School of the Air began, teachers in service have played an important part in planning the programs and evaluating the results in the classrooms. With little in the way of precedent to look to for guidance this cooperation has been an important factor in the advancement which has been made," explains H. B. McCarty, director of the school.

The second semester program, just announced, includes Wisconsin nature study, conducted by Walter MacNeel, state 4-H club leader, travel stories, story telling for the elementary grades, drawing for high school students, music by Prof. E. B. Gordon of the University of Wisconsin School of Music, music for young children, English, art, games for young children, and weekly lectures by experts on contemporary affairs.

A weekly symposium for Wisconsin teachers has also been arranged. A research project which will investigate the present work and the possibilities for future expansion has been undertaken jointly by McCarty, the Wisconsin Education association, the state department of public instruction, and the university and normal school regents.

Two Pupils on Semester
Honor Roll at School
Marcella Kasten and Patricia Simpson were on the A honor roll at the Woodside school, town of Freedom, during the first semester, according to Miss Beatrice Erdman, teacher. John Simpson was neither absent nor tardy during the semester. Marcella Kasten and Patricia Simpson missed one day of school. Eighth grade pupils wrote their own plays based on "A Christmas Carol."

Three Farm Institutes
Will be Held This Week
Three farm institutes will be held in Outagamie county this week, according to R. C. Swanson, county agricultural agent. The first will be held at Kaukauna on Tuesday, the second at Hortonville on Wednesday and Thursday and the third at Shiocton on Friday. Speakers from the state university extension division and school of agriculture will appear at each of the meetings.

16 Contagious Cases
Reported During Week
During the week ended Jan. 15, 30 cases of contagious disease were found in Outagamie county, according to a report received by Miss Marie Klein, county nurse, from the state board of health. In Appleton there were 16 cases of chicken pox and one each of measles and mumps. Kaukauna, Maple Creek and Oneida each reported two cases of measles and Osborn one. Oneida also reported three cases of influenza.

County Pays $1,178

Seventy-two claims for damages caused by dogs and amounting to $1,178.58 were paid in Outagamie county last year, according to record at the office of John E. Hantschel, county clerk. During the year 3,449 dogs were licensed and receipts amounted to $4,893.36 of which $207.70 was sent to the state. The following claims were paid: 10 cattle, $235; 1 horse, $72; 110 sheep, $487.84; 554 poultry, $363.74.

What's New at the Library

"Forever Ulysses," a book which is thought to have been inspired by the life of Sir Basil Zaharoff, the late munitions king, is the Book-of-the-Month selection for January. The story of a Greek adventurer, a man of many wives who is always ready to turn a dishonest penny, it tells of his many fascinating adventures in Athens, Alexandria and other places and of his rise from bootblack to armament king. The author is C. P. Rodocanachi.

The transformation of ancient into modern China as seen through women's eyes is presented by Florence Ayscough in "Chinese Women, Yesterday and Today." The book includes biographies of outstanding women who have helped to bring about this change and who are typical of the old and new China.

"East side, west side, all around the town," is the journey traveled by Hubert Footner in his book, "New York, City of Clues," which is among the new additions to the shelves at Appleton Public library. She shows New York to be both beautiful and ugly, kind and cruel, and gives full rein to his likes and dislikes and debunks much of her false glamour and many of her myths. The author, a former New Yorker now living in Maryland, admits that it is impossible to fix the character of New York, and then tries to do it. He describes Wall street, Fifth avenue, and Times Square, shows scenes from the tenements, hospital wards and police courts.

Finding lost cities in the jungle, bringing back live specimens of rare animals and still managing to escape the "fatal ending" have been the experiences of Lawrence Griswold, archaeologist, who wrote "Tombs, Travel and Trouble." Over a period of 16 years he many times experienced fever and prolonged thirst, encounters with cannibals and head hunters, Cascabels and bushmasters. He was lost at sea for five days without water and for 62 days lived as a captive among savage Jibaras, a tribe of Indians so primitive that they had never seen hair on a human face.

"Life on the English Manor" by H. S. Bennett gives an intimate account of the everyday life of a peasant in village England in the twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth centuries. The author has put together a convincing picture of the common lot of a working man seven hundred years old.

An intimate story of day-to-day happenings in the American delegation, drawn from a full diary and from letters home, is given in "At the Paris Peace Conference" by James T. Shotwell. "Peaceful Change" by William T. Stone and Carl M. Kichelberger is a survey prepared for the national peace conference campaign for world economic cooperation.

A practical manual of selling suggestions for salesmen and saleswomen is "Successful Salesmanship" by Paul W. Ivey. The selling principles embodied here have been used by the author in numerous training courses he wrote and conducted.

An up-to-date collection of biographical sketches of all the men and women who have won outstanding reputations in the world of music in bygone years as well as those of the present generation who are creating today's music and giving superb performances of the composers of the past is the Standard Book of Celebrated Musicians by Hubert Whelbourn. In it are sketches of Beethoven, Schubert, Chaliapin, Debussy, Gershwin, Grieg, Heifetz, Kreisler, Melchior, Yeduhl, Menuhin, Mozart, Lily Pons, Sousa, Siokowski, Stravinsky, Toscanini, Verdi and many others.

Don't waste your time looking for a 1913 Liberty head nickel for such coins are not and never were in circulation, is the advice given in Burt's United States Coin Book, now available at Appleton Public library. Only six 1913 Liberty head nickels were made and all of them were quickly placed in collections, the book points out.

Proper use of tools in wood turning is discussed in the book,

"Course in Wood Turning" by A. S. Milton and O. K. Wohlers. The book presents problems so that each project depends somewhat on the one preceding.

"Model Making" by Raymond Francis Yates is a practical treatise for the amateur and professional mechanic, giving instructions on the various processes and operations involved in model making and the actual construction of numerous models including steam engines, speed boats, guns, cranes, etc.

Hit-Run Motorist Seriously Injures Greenville Farmer

William Stelter Found Lying Near Highway 10 4 Miles West of City

County police and sheriff's officers today were seeking a hit-and-run motorist who struck and critically injured William Stelter, about 51, town of Greenville, early this morning on Highway 10, near Leppia's corners about 6 miles west of Appleton.

Stelter is confined to St. Elizabeth hospital with a compound fracture of both legs, dislocated shoulder, concussion of the brain and severe lacerations about the face and head.

He was found by a motorist about 1 o'clock this morning and brought to Appleton. Stelter was lying in a ditch along side the highway and it is believed he had been there about an hour.

Albert Saar, 211 N. Richmond street, and Irene Dompf, 1400 W. street, escaped injury when the car in which they were riding and a Soo line freight train collided at 11:15 last night at the Main street crossing, Neenah. The machine was badly damaged.

Baer, driver of the car, told police he was going east on Main street. The locomotive was backing across the street to couple with box cars after having taken on water from a tank. The train was southbound.

A car driven by W. J. VanderHyden, 37, 611 S. Baird street, Green Bay, was damaged about the front end when it was involved in an accident with a truck driven by Oscar Woldt, 35, route 3, Appleton, about 9:45 this morning.

VanderHyden was traveling south on N. Richmond street and Woldt was going east on Wisconsin when the machines collided, according to police.

Buchanan Heads Boy Scout Drive

Advance Work Started; General Campaign Shooting at $4,500

William Buchanan is chairman of the Appleton district Boy Scout advance campaign committee which has started its work. Dates for the general campaign in which the goal will be $4,500 will be set by the board of directors in a meeting Friday night at the Conway hotel.

Walter Dixon, scout executive, said today.

Other members of the advance campaign committee are F. N. Belanger, Basil McKenzie, W. A. Strassburger, Kenneth H. Corbett, Dr. D. M. Gallagher, E. E. Cahill, R. H. Purdy, George Wetengel, Carl Holstrom, F. C. Heinritz, Dr. Carl Neidhold, Herb Hellig, and J. R. Whitman.

Letters signed by Buchanan, have been sent throughout the district and responses already have been received at the Appleton office, Dixon reported.

Gets Installment on PWA Grant for School

A check of $81,592, the second installment on the new senior high school PWA grant, was received by Joseph A. Kov, city treasurer, this morning from the United States Treasury department. The total grant is $383,750 and to date $303,342 has been received, the treasurer said. The bond issue for the school, which will be completed in April, is $481,000.

Enters Guilty Plea to Petty Larceny Charge

Thomas O'Brian, 29, Chicago, pleaded guilty of petty larceny and was fined $10 and costs with an alternative of 20 days in the county detention camp by Judge Thomas H. O'Brian indicated he would serve out the sentence.

ported many broken and fallen trees.

Railroads reported no lapses or lagging in their scheduled movements of passenger and freight trains, but some schedule in some parts of the Fox river valley and north were delayed. Northwest Airlines at Milwaukee reported all planes on the Chicago-Minneapolis route grounded because of soggy landing fields and poor visibility.

Flood at Janesville

Janesville on the southern border of the state seemed hardest hit by the precipitation. Overflowing of the Spring brook where it joins the Rock river left some sections of the city 4 and 5 feet under water and forced four families to call the fire department for assistance in leaving their residences.

Some Janesville streets were closed, and the highway to Beloit from Janesville was blocked off. An estimated 1.70 inches of rain fell during the night and continued rain was the order today.

Milwaukee reported 1.71 inches of rain at 6 a. m. today with many low-lying sections of the city inundated by the failure of ice-clogged catch basins to carry off the moisture. At Madison rain turned to sleet.

Streets Flooded

Heavy snow was reported falling at Green Bay after a night-long precipitation. Eau Claire also reported a heavy fall today after rain last night. At Sheboygan 1 1/2 inches of rain had fallen today and the Sheboygan river overflowed its banks into a portion of the city, flooding streets and calling forth city crews to open clogged sewers.

The state highway office at Green Bay reported 6 to 8 inches of snow through the northeastern part of Wisconsin with a heavy fall still in progress and travel bed in the area.

Weather bureau reports at Milwaukee indicated a strong probability of a freeze with the announcement of a severe cold wave to descend on the state tonight or tomorrow.

Snow was reported today also at Rhinelander and LaCrosse.

Solons Favor Ban On Bank Control By Holding Firms

LaFollette, Reilly Believe Action Should Await Study of Problem

BY RUBY A. BLACK (Post-Crescent Correspondent)

Washington—Senator Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., Madison Progressive, and Congressman Michael K. Reilly, Fond du Lac Democrat, who is a member of the house banking and currency committee, agree with each other and with the president that something should be done to eliminate bank holding companies.

Neither of them, however, has definite ideas about how it should be done.

LaFollette said he thought the problem should be given careful study, before any legislation is enacted, and predicted that the senate committee on banking and currency would make a thorough study before favorably reporting a bill.

"I am for the elimination of all holding companies which have no economic justification," LaFollette said.

"I think we should re-study the public utilities holding company act, and strengthen it if necessary," Reilly, saying he could not comment in detail until his committee had studied any proposed measure, reminded that he had always favored the independent banker, "who developed this country," and opposed extensive branch banking and holding company ownership of banks.

"The difficulty is in unscrambling what we have now," Reilly said. "It would be easy to pass a law prohibiting holding company ownership of banks in the future. The difficulty is to find out what to do about those already in existence."

Milton Sworn in As New Senator From New Jersey

Milton, appointed senator from New Jersey to succeed Governor A. Harry Moore.

2. Republicans and some Democrats were expected to fight approval of a compromise bill to aid home construction unless the senate reinstated an amendment by Senator Lodge (R-Mass.) to require payment of prevailing wages on government insured building projects.

The opposition to Milton developed in connection with the fact he has been a legal adviser to Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, who has fought the activities of CIO organizers in his community. John L. Lewis and other CIO leaders are active in Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Will File Objections

Holderman announced he would file with Vice President Garner a "bill of particulars" against the appointee.

Normally any charges against new senators are considered by the elections committee. Chairman George D. Gao and Senator Connally (D-Texas), a committee member, contended an investigation of Milton would not be justified if the accusations involved nothing more than his political views.

The housing legislation has been hanging over since the special session last fall. If the senate approves it, the bill will go to the White House as the first administration proposal to be enacted this year.

Eliminate Amendment

A conference committee of senators and representatives struck out Lodge's amendment, and the house approved the compromise bill omitting it.

Sensor Wagner (D-N. Y.), author of both the housing and the anti-lynching bills, was expected to make the decision as to whether the housing bill would be considered at once, temporarily displacing the anti-lynching bill.

Discussion of the housing legislation would give southerners a rest from their two and a half weeks' speechmaking against the latter measure.

They want to continue the filibuster until the anti-lynching bill is shelved.

Sensor Connally, leader of the southern forces, said the responsibility for any delay in enactment of the administration program would rest with the Democratic leadership.

He added that southerners might seek to sidetrack the anti-lynching bill Wednesday so that the independent offices appropriations bill could be considered.

Night Sessions

Administration leaders, trying to break up the filibuster, ordered night sessions, starting tonight. Opponents, however, declared they could keep talking indefinitely if necessary.

The senate judiciary committee was expected to approve today the nomination of Stanley F. Reed to be a supreme court justice. The nomination can be considered by the senate at any time thereafter without affecting the status of the anti-lynching legislation.

While the senate program remained in a tangle, committees were getting ready to present more national legislation. A joint senate-house committee probably will complete a compromise farm bill this week. It will be given priority under an agreement made last year.

The house ways and means committee was nearly through with hearings on tax revision proposals. The legislation will be considered by the house, however, before the senate debates it.

Another controversial subject will be turned over to congress early this week when President Roosevelt submits recommendations for a naval expansion program. Blocs were forming in both chambers to oppose any further increase, but administration leaders expressed certainty the recommendations would be enacted.

No Decisions on Added Oil Cases

Two Other Anti-Trust Investigations on in East and West

Washington—(P)—Officials of the justice department said today no decisions as to court action had been reached in two other anti-trust investigations of oil companies similar to that which led to the Madison, Wis., trials.

A jury convicted 16 oil companies and 30 individuals at Madison Saturday of conspiring to raise and fix gasoline prices in 10 midwestern states during 1935 and 1936.

The other investigations are underway on the east and west coast. Two attorneys from the department's anti-trust division have been engaged for several months in examination of books of major oil companies operating on the west coast.

There has been no decision as to whether the findings warrant any civil or criminal action.

The east coast investigation was said to have been limited almost entirely to examination of complaints received at department offices here. Lack of men and money for field investigations was responsible for this policy, the spokesmen said.

France Guards Border Against Aerial Raids

Perpignan, France—(P)—French army authorities today hastened installation of new anti-aircraft and artillery batteries on the Spanish frontier to fight off insurgent warplanes after Spain's devastating aerial warfare had overlapped on to French territory.

At least 80 persons were killed and hundreds wounded in the fury of weekend reprisal and counter-reprisal assaults on a dozen Spanish cities and towns, both insurgents and government striking and receiving punishment in return.

(France sent a formal protest to the insurgent regime against the frontier bombings.)

An official survey showed no serious damage was caused by 11 insurgent bombs that fell just inside French territory yesterday when Puigcerda, Catalan railroad, was bombed with between 21 and 30 fatalities.

Refugees from Puigcerda fled across the border to France.

In 1914, Mr. and Mrs. Wurl disposed of their business there and moved to Clintonville, where they purchased the Columbia hotel, which they operated for the last 24 years.

The deceased was a member of the Congregational church and of the Clintonville Chapter of War Mothers. Survivors are the widow, a son by a former marriage, Charles McLeod of Hampton, Minn.; three daughters, Mrs. Jewell McKenzie, Clintonville, Mrs. Oren Richards and Mrs. Raymond Smith, Chicago; two sons, George Wurl, Chicago, and Kenneth Wurl, Clintonville. There are nine grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. There was a large attendance at the funeral, there being a large number of relatives and friends from out-of-town present.

Between 1906 and 1912 the United States government helped 13,000 laborers to emigrate from Spain, Portugal and Russia to Hawaii because of a labor shortage there.

OFFICIAL AAA SAFETY TESTS MADE ON SLIPPERY ROADS

American Automobile Association in Test No. 3143, conducted by their Contest Board, proved that a car equipped with a pair of Weed American Bar-Reinforced Tire Chains stopped in 45.3% less distance than required when the chains were not used. Using the chains on all four tires reduced the stopping distance 66.8%.

When these percentage figures are interpreted in feet and seconds, they reveal that good chains may often mean the difference between safety and a dangerous collision.

STOP. How do you know you can stop? Says the careful driver, "Because I have WEED American Bar-Reinforced Tire Chains—the chains that grip the road forward, backward and sideways."

WEED Americans, with those double-welded Bar-Reinforcements, are the safer Tire Chains. They give you more safe mileage, too. Because there's twice the metal to wear through. And the metal is tough, wear-resisting "Weed-alloy"—especially developed for WEED Tire Chains. Side chains are welded and case-hardened for extra wear. BEAT THE BLIZZARD!

GROUND GRIP TIRES FOR CARS • TRUCKS AND BUSES

THE new Super-Traction Firestone Ground Grip Tire with extra deep tread and extra wide bars of wear-resisting rubber gives the greatest traction ever known for cars, trucks and buses operating on muddy, snowy and unimproved roads.

DEEPER BITE FOR GREATER TRACTION. The tread is flatter with higher shoulders and bigger, broader bars of rubber. Wider, deeper, tapered spaces between the lugs assure positive self-cleaning action and continuous traction.

GREATER ROADABILITY. Tread is designed to fit the road, providing materially longer life.

LONGER WEAR, GREATER ECONOMY. The tread is made of special, extra-tough, wear-resisting rubber which assures longer mileage. All the traction bars are joined together in a continuous design to prevent bumping on paved roads and each is triple-braced and triple anchored preventing it from breaking off as so often happens when separate rubber lugs are used.

EXTRA STRENGTH FOR GREATER SAFETY. Every fiber of every cord is saturated with liquid rubber by the Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process. This greatly increases the strength of the tire to withstand the strain of extra traction. Two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread bind the tread and cord body so solidly together that we guarantee they will not separate.

Come in today and find out how little it costs to equip your car, truck or school bus with new super-traction Firestone Ground Grip Tires.

When roads are covered with snow, farmers need the extra traction of the new Firestone Ground Grip Tires

Farm trucks equipped with the new Super-Traction Firestone Ground Grip Tires are able to "make their own roads"

Under The Capitol Dome

By John Wynyard
Post-Crescent Staff Correspondent

Madison—A topic which is furnishing considerable food for gossip at caucuses of Wisconsin politicians these days, and one that, strangely enough, has received scant attention in print, is the growing dissension in the ranks of the young Progressive party.

For a number of reasons, the old esprit de corps which once dominated the Progressive organization—during the days when it was a movement rather than a political party—is vanishing. In its place have come jealousy, differences over policies and methods, factional rivalry.

It has now reached a point at which it is being freely predicted that before many more weeks the LaFollette brothers, and particularly Senator Bob, will be obliged to call a convention to iron out the causes of discord and restore the harmony which has not existed for many months.

Internal critics of the Progressive party today are of two groups: the old timers who still nurse their mortification that the party of "Old Bob" should be in the hands of his sons be allied with the Socialists; the idealists who profess to see a degeneration of the party ideals, a subordination of liberalism to political expediency, and a domination of the party by a machine clique steered by Governor LaFollette's secretariat.

One of the things which is almost certain to increase the friction already existing is the matter of 1938 party candidates. Rumors, whether authentic or not, have been widely disseminated that the executive office is picking men for the choice posts. Because the Progressive party has plenty of men, and particularly young men, who are anxious to move up a notch on the public payroll, such reports will not be helpful for party morale this summer and fall.

U. W. Centenary
One hundred years ago the area which the citizens of Wisconsin now know as their state was for the most part a primitive wilderness, a part of that vast frontier which the ruling Eastern states, when they thought of it at all, thought of vaguely as the land of wild Indians, deep forests, beautiful rivers, and the source of milady's furs.

A rough and ready Indian fighter and southern Wisconsin miner, Henry Dodge, was governor of Wisconsin Territory, for it was a decade before Wisconsin came of age and joined the union of States.

On a bleak, cold day in January, 1838, three members of the council of the Territory of Wisconsin reported for passage by the council Bill number 99. Without debate, the council resolved itself into a committee of the whole, immediately considered the bill, approved slight amendments in two sections, and then passed it unanimously. A few days later the Territorial House of Representatives concurred in the measure, sent it to Governor Dodge, who signed it into law.

Thus was born the University of Wisconsin, which in the century since has become Wisconsin's biggest educational plant, enrolling now almost 11,000 young men and women, and counting among its graduates leaders in all fields of modern life all over the world. Bill number 99 was to establish the University of the Territory of Wisconsin near Madison, the capital of the territory. In fact, however, the university did not actually begin functioning, until after Wisconsin became a state, enrolling its first class in 1850.

Notes on Education
One of the most industrious and aggressive professional organizations in the state is the Wisconsin Education association, which has a paid-up membership of more than 20,000 state teachers. Many of its numerous researches disclose startling facts, which are used effectively ranking of states, Wisconsin was placed sixteenth.

Few Male Teachers
One teacher in every five is a man in both the United States and Wisconsin.

Wisconsin teachers have on an average 27 pupils; in rural schools the average is much lower; in city schools it is considerably higher. Twenty-one states, including Wisconsin, have tenure laws for teachers.

The average Wisconsin teacher's salary is below the national average.

The cost of all public education in Wisconsin is about 5.5 cents a day for each inhabitant of the state.

The value of school buildings and sites in Wisconsin is over $150,000,000; the value of equipment $20,000,000 more.

Eighty per cent of Wisconsin's school buildings consist of only one room, and Wisconsin is exceeded by only three states, the Dakotas and Nebraska in the number of such schools.

Political Stepladder
A study just completed by the Wisconsin Legislative Reference library proves what practical politicians have known for a long time, that a seat in the legislature is one of the best beginnings for a political career.

The report compiled by the library shows that in the history of Wisconsin politics, an unusually large number of men have risen from membership in the state senate or assembly to high state and national offices.

For example: 12 legislators have risen to the state supreme court; 11 out of 27 governors since 1848 served in the legislature; 15 out of 28 lieutenant governors, 13 out of 23 secretaries of state, nine out of 19 state treasurers, and 15 out of 28 attorneys general followed the same path upward.

Beginning with Morgan L. Martin of Green Bay who was a Wisconsin territorial delegate in Congress in 1845, the Wisconsin legislature has produced 63 members of the House of representatives, nine senators, and many high federal officers, including foreign diplomats.

Senators who won their political spurs under Wisconsin's capitol dome were Philetus Sawyer, Angus Cameron, Isaac Stephenson, John Cort Spooner, W. F. Vilas, Joseph V. Quarles, Irvine L. Lenroot, Paul O. Hustling, and John J. Blaine, all of them front ranking leaders in their day.

James Whitcomb Riley was an itinerant sign-painter, entertainer and assistant to patent medicine vendors before he began publishing verses.

YOUR Income Tax

HOW TO AVOID COMMON ERRORS

The period for the filing of income-tax returns covering the calendar year 1937 began January 1 and ends at midnight of March 15, 1938. To file early is of mutual benefit to the Government and the taxpayer. Within this period are filed annually millions of individual income-tax returns, a large portion of which report income subject to the tax. The latter contain a considerable percentage of errors, which if uncorrected by the audit would result to the disadvantage of the taxpayer. Many are errors of computation easily discovered on the face of the return, which usually is accompanied by a payment of more than the amount of tax due. In other returns it is readily discernible that the taxpayer has failed to take advantage of the personal exemption, credit allowed for dependents, or deductions from gross income to which he is entitled.

To avoid these and other errors, the Bureau of Internal Revenue urges careful reading of the instructions accompanying the forms for filing the returns. Additional information, if needed, may be obtained at the office of a collector of internal revenue, deputy collector, or an internal revenue agent in charge. Taxpayers who apply to revenue officers for assistance in preparing returns should bring with them a copy of their prior year return. Also, as a further aid in the preparation of a correct income-tax return for the year 1937, the Bureau has prepared a series of short newspaper articles, of which this is the first, advising the salaried man, wage earner, professional and businessman—in fact, every class of individual taxpayer—of his requirements and privileges as interpreted under the latest regulations, rulings, and decisions relating to the income-tax law.

GET UP AT NIGHT?

A DIURETIC stimulant such as Dr. Pierce's is often indicated and usually it is sufficient to relieve minor kidney irregularities. Mrs. Milton Harris, 1019 Dore Lane, Toledo, Ohio, says: "During the day I always felt tired, as much of my rest at night was lost from frequent rising. After using Dr. Pierce's I found necessary to take to relieve the trouble. Buy Dr. Pierce's A-Mutic at any drug store."

Failure to Count to 13 Inexcusable

BY ELY CULBERTSON

In discussing and criticizing errors of play, experts draw a sharp dividing line between errors of judgment and all other types. They realize that it is unfair to "charge" a player with a definite "bluff" when as a matter of fact, he may have had the closest sort of choice to make. When the mistake is a demonstrable one, however, it is quite another matter. Failure to count to thirteen is a standard, never-changing bridge crime. The true bridge addict ranks it far worse than wife beating, for example, although slightly short of homicide.

The bidding:

South West North East

1 diamond Pass 1 heart Pass

2 clubs Pass 2 hearts Pass

3 clubs Pass 3 diamonds Pass

4 diamonds Pass 4 diamonds Double

Pass Pass

South's four diamond bid was outrageously optimistic. Up to this point his partner had shown no particular strength except in the heart suit, the last material that South would be able to use. South should have feared losing three spade tricks off the reel, and he had no assurance that his two five card suits would come in solidly.

Due to the not unusual combination of good luck and horrible defense, however, the overall contract had surprising success.

West made what appeared from his hand the best opening lead, namely, the singleton heart. Dummy's ten was played and East, for no reason under the sun, put up his ace. East, of course, could count all thirteen hearts. That he should have given up control at the first trick is hard to understand. Declarer ruffed and laid down the ace of diamonds, then a low diamond to the king. The king, queen, and jack of hearts permitted the discard of declarer's three spades. The club jack then was led and the queen gobbled up. East was permitted to ruff the ten with his jack of trump, but the rest of the tricks then were declarer's since West's nine of clubs easily could be ruffed away.

Had East properly conserved his heart ace at the first trick, declarer, who, of course, could not dream that the heart suit was divided so fantastically, would have discarded a spade and then, undoubtedly, would have led the heart king through East. The latter should, of course, duck for the second time. Declarer would throw a spade and West would ruff returning a spade. The king would win for the defender's second trick, and now a low heart would put declarer in serious difficulties. To ruff with an honor would establish a sure trump trick for East, and also embarrass declarer in the establishment of his club suit. To ruff low would be to concede West's eighth of trumps. Thus, East's inexcusable play of the heart ace cost the defender at least two tricks and a great many points.

My Neighbor Says—

Eggs should always be cooked over a low fire. If poaching eggs keep the water below boiling. If frying them let them cook slowly, pouring the fat over the yolk to cook the film of white which covers it or cover the pan. And even when boiling eggs hard the cooking water is kept well below boiling to insure a tender evenly cooked egg.

Borax whitens napkins. Use a tablespoon of borax in each two quarts of water used for rinsing the napkins.

When milk has turned sour allow it to stand until it wheys, then turn into a cheesecloth bag and hang up to drain until dry. You will then have cottage cheese.

Do not add salt to potatoes until they are almost boiled if you wish them to be white and fluffy.

If the garden hose has sprung tiny holes, paint it with roofing paint and it will last the season through.

Scald the coffee pot daily after it has been washed and every week soak it in strong-washing powder and hot water solution, and then rinse in quantities of boiling water. Invert to dry or wipe out carefully with a soft cloth.

Parental Discipline is Based on Responsibility

BY ANGELO PATRI

"Isn't there some way by which parents can get together and decide upon rules that all will accept and so save some of us the eternal wail, 'John's mother let him—Mary's mother says it is all right, Jean's father let's him,' and so forth?"

No, there is no such pleasant road to peace. It may be quite all right for John to drive a car and quite all wrong for Jean, although both are seniors in high school. It may be perfectly reasonable for one girl to use a latchkey and quite out of the question for another girl to have any such liberty.

Parental decisions are based on the character and nature of the child in question. No two of them are alike in the beginning. No two ever grow at the same rate, physically or mentally, nor in the same directions. The differences are individual, and the parental decisions made for their safety and welfare must be individual.

It is best to get rid of the common notion at the start. Most parents think that they have to "treat them all alike." They need not and should not do anything of the kind. Any attempt to treat a family of children alike, by giving each the same privileges, denying each the same pleasures, is bound to come to disaster. Each must be treated according to his state of growth and development.

What one can do easily another cannot do at all. It is best to understand that and have the children understand that, at the start.

A general tone can be set by the family and community. This involves principles of behavior. Certain things are not done. These are things that permit of no argument; drinking while driving for example, and others not necessary to mention. But the details such as at what age a young person shall have a key, drive a car, go out nights without check, live independently while still a dependent, must be settled individually.

The best basis that I have found for such decisions is the young person's sense of responsibility, as shown by his behavior. If he or she has shown, by repeated actions, that his or her word is to be trusted, that his or her use of a car is sensible and safe as possible, that his or her judgment is usually good, a father and mother are justified in allowing that young person full enjoyment of the privileges he or she claims. But, if the contrary is true, the parents are fully justified, even forced, to refuse such privileges.

One young man told me a long story of the injustice, harshness, prejudiced actions of his parents. They wouldn't give him weekly pocket money. He got it by the day. He was not allowed to use the car. He was not allowed to go out at night without someone the family accepted to go along with him. He was suffering great hardship.

This lad had smashed two cars and injured one person; he had cut college and gone on a trip for which his father had to pay, he said he was going one place and went another; he said he would be home at a certain hour and did not come home at all. And he wanted his liberty. I'm sure his father and mother longed for freedom from the results of his behavior, but they couldn't have it.

Each according to his expression of responsibility.

Uncle Ray's Corner

Through the Suez Canal

Suez Canal: As we pass through the Suez Canal, my mind goes back to Ferdinand de Lesseps, the great French engineer. He was a dreamer, but he worked to make his dreams come true. For years he thought about, and planned, a canal which would join the Mediterranean sea with the Red sea.

It was hard to raise money for the project, and hard to get public officers to agree, but at last he did the deed. The result was the Suez canal.

Back in 1850, three continents were joined by land—Europe, Asia, and Africa. Europe and Asia still are joined together, and it is in no way likely that they ever will be cut apart. Thousands of miles of their borders are together. Indeed, many geographers class Europe and Asia together as one continent—Eurasia. There is good reason for this, but old custom stays, and it is common to count the land mass as making two continents.

Africa, on the other hand, was joined to Asia by only a little land between Egypt and northern Arabia. This land was what de Lesseps cut through when the Suez canal was dug.

The canal was opened in 1869, and at once made a big difference in world trade. Ships traveling from Europe to India or China were able to save thousands of miles of distance, because they no longer had to go clear around southern Africa to reach the Indian ocean.

A long-term lease was obtained from Egypt by the canal company. This company pays heavy dividends for it collects large tolls on every vessel that uses the Suez canal. Most of the stock in the company is owned by French capitalists and by the British government.

To pass through the Suez canal, I leased the S. S. Rawalpindi. We shall finish the passage in about 15 hours, then shall pass the port city known as Suez. Later this steamer will carry me down the Red sea and across the Indian ocean to India and Ceylon.

LETTERS ABOUT WEDDINGS

Dear Mrs. Post: Our daughter's future in-laws are coming a thousand miles to the wedding and we don't know what we ought to do for them. Of course none of us have ever met them and we know them only through their son. But I certainly feel that we perhaps will seem very inhospitable if we don't take care of them. Our house will probably not be able to accommodate extra people, or at best many extra ones at such a busy time, so in this case do you think we ought to take a suite of rooms for them at the hotel? And is any one expected to write to them and tell them, or what? Please tell us, as I feel it is best to follow the rules when in doubt as to the type of people they are.

Answer: Much the best thing to do about this is to talk it over frankly with the groom, who is the only person who knows you both, your situation, their situation, your point of view and their point of view. If you are able to do so, that

Wax is Used To Prevent Split Nails

BY ELSIE PIERCE

We don't know just what it is that causes nails to split. We tell you so very honestly. We've asked a dozen authorities—physicians and beauticians and some feel that a deficiency of calcium in the diet may cause the nails to crack. Some say, "Avoid washing the hands too often and do not use caustic soaps or cleansing agents." (Well, don't use them on general principles.) The fact is, however, that there is no general consensus of opinion among authorities as to just what causes the nails to crack.

The latest novelty to come out of Hollywood is a nail wax. She who by appointment to some of the most famous hands in Hollywood, manicured their nails, did, in the course of her work, develop a rather remarkable wax. She would apply the wax first and then the polish. The combination seemed conducive to the growth of longer nails. As Hollywood's nails grew to new length, Hollywood itself went to great lengths in singing the praises of this protective procedure. The wax has a lustre and sheen of its own, in addition to its protective powers. The lacquer that comes with it shines smoothly and clings long and affectionately.

I particularly like the frankness with which you are warned to follow directions to the letter. I also like the caution that at first the wax (not your nails) may chip off until your nails become obediently accustomed to it, but gradually it will do its smooth job. When the nails have grown out quite a way you can put the protective wax on the underside as well as over the nail.

If your favorite manicurist does not have them, you can buy the wax and the lacquer and take them to her, or play around with them yourself. If you like, it seems to me that any woman who has had the hateful experience of having her nails chip and break, and just when they were a perfect length too, would be happy to try anything once.

GAY TOUCHES

Ad 4592

To remove the smudges from utensils used over an open flame rub with crumpled newspapers, then apply a few drops of kerosene to the paper and rub the kettle until it's clean. Wipe with more dry papers. Do not let any of the kerosene get inside of the kettle. If the smudge is not too thick, it can be removed with a metal wire pot scraper.

DOROTHY DIX

But, coming down from the clouds of sentiment to the brass tacks of everyday living, there are some practical commonplace things that every husband and wife have a right to expect of each other and would go a long way toward making marriage a success instead of a racket for divorce lawyers if only they would meet their honest obligations.

Every husband or wife has a right to expect faithfulness from his or her mate. When a man gives a woman his name and trusts his honor to her keeping he has a right to expect her to keep them clean and not drag them in the mire. When a woman puts her life into a man's hands she has a right to expect him to guard well the treasure she has bestowed upon him and not throw it away for a wanton. The green-eyed monster has no place in the family circle. There can be no happiness in any marriage unless the husband and wife absolutely trust each other. Unless a man has had enough of philandering and a woman is tired of flirtations, in common humanity they should stay single.

EMPIRE FOR A LADY

BY ALAN LEMAY

Chapter 1

A Girl from Another World

It was impossible to believe that she was there, whenever I looked away from her.

Beyond the motionless bowspit of the little ship lay the flat, blinding salt water of the bay of Balingong; beyond that, the jungle hemming the broad mouth of the Siderong river. And from all through the foothills and the jungle and the river was coming the tireless, dissonant beat of Dyak agongs, singing war, hate, and blood hunger. Nothing about the land or the sea would let you forget for a moment that you were in the deep tropics of Asiatic waters—half way between Borneo and Australia, in that maze of 10,000 dark-skinned islands some of whose waters still lie uncharted. Incredible that an English girl of 20 should be there, sitting in a folding officer-chair under the yawl's afterdeck awning. Every time I heard her low voice it was with a repeated sense of bafflement, of disbelief.

Yet she was there, and we were all acutely aware of her—more conscious of her than of the agongs, or the brassy sea, or of our own ship, the Linkang, which lay at anchor six chains away. And she was real—very real.

In the fantastic dream which is my memory of Balingong, Christine Forrester stands out as more actual than any other thing. Plainly I can hear the weird battle cry of the Malays, and smell the burning nipu that, and watch the silky nerve-edging smile of the Rajah Mantusen offering lies more deadly than his kris. But those things, and not the English girl, are what seem unreal.

As she sat that day, under the awning of the afterdeck, the picture of her is very clear. I see the little pulse in her throat, and the grave steadiness of her eyes, and her slim straight fingers. She remains as real as the tarred deck seams, or the scent of ginger blossoms from over the flat salt water.

At first, though, her presence was bewildering. Two years in Asiatic waters had accustomed me to many things. When you are new out there it is very hard to realize that so much of the world can remain so little known. To a Londoner or a Gloucesterman, that part of the Pacific is a full 10,000 miles from home, and you are shocked to find that you can trade unfail to a Dyak because he wants to use it in decorating a human skull.

But presently you begin to see reasons. The Pacific is a big place, with more than 30,000 islands in one great belt which swings a good 3,000 miles across the South Seas. And the simple fact is that we have known nothing of this vast maze because we have not realized until lately that there was anything there to steal. I got used to the idea that there are whole groups of islands where it is unsafe for any vessel to go; and even those islands lost their strangeness when they became the fabric of my life.

But now the presence of an English girl very actually drinking tea in the bay of Balingong brought all that first strangeness back. Here were two exact: opposite worlds, set side by side, and it did not seem possible that both of them could be.

Baffled

James Clyde, my uncle, showed his bewilderment. For years he had known this vessel. But as I had gathered from his occasional frivolous references to it in all that time Clyde had regarded it simply as the hobby of an uncompanionable Englishman with a glassy-eyed curiosity about strange peoples. Now the Ayen had changed in ways that did not explain themselves, and bafflement was plain, readable in my uncle's face.

James Clyde was only 10 years older than I was—in his middle 30's—but those 10 years had been spent in Asiatic waters, so that his lean features had a carved, leathery polish. Usually he looked lively and vital, his wide-set, natively pleasant eyes were very much aware of everyone around him; but now he seemed to have forgotten altogether that others were watching him, too.

Defense Attorneys Ready To Continue Legal Battle In Oil Conspiracy Case

Madison—(A)—Quiet reigned today in this abandoned oil capital where 16 major companies were convicted of gasoline price-fixing but defense attorneys left behind were preparing the groundwork for further battle that may extend into the nation's highest courts.

The first degree defense move will be upset the verdict of a federal court jury holding the companies and 30 executives guilty of conspiracy to violate the Sherman anti-trust act by rigging the gasoline market in 10 midwestern states.

If Judge Patrick T. Stone denies this motion, the defense will press for a new trial. The motions are to be filed tomorrow but will not be heard by Judge Stone for several weeks.

pany of Indiana and one of the convicted defendants, had this to say: "The issues in this case are largely economic. I believe the government would be the last to assert there was any intentional or flagrant violation of the Sherman act." Seubert said he was satisfied that on rehearing or appeal the defense will be sustained.

10 States Involved

The 10 states involved were known in the industry as the Standard of Indiana territory. The federal court of Madison, where the case was tried for four months, is part of this territory. According to unofficial estimates the companies affected produced 85 per cent of the gasoline sold in the 10 states.

The companies sold to independent jobbers at the spot market—the published quotation of the price at the independent refineries. During 1935 and 1936 major concerns purchased surplus gasoline from the independent refiners. At the same time there was a gradual rise and leveling off of the spot market quotations.

The defendant companies claimed that in purchasing surplus supplies, they were encouraged by the government through the NRA and that the only object was stabilization. The government contended they were acting on their own initiative, exceeding the authority granted them and reaping the benefit of high prices.

Among the individuals convicted—presidents, vice presidents and managers well-known to the industry—one stood out. He was Charles Arnott of New York, vice president of Socony-Vacuum. With his silvery hair, winged collar and persistent smile, Arnott commanded attention. The government concentrated on him, called him "master mind of the conspiracy."

January Steel Orders Better Than December

Slight Improvement in Demand With Buying In Small Lots

Slight improvement in demand for steel continues to manifest itself but not sufficient to indicate a marked change in the position of consumers, says Steel.

Buying in small lots and its nature indicates it is for filling gaps in stock rather than for protecting the future. Prompt shipment is asked. Rolling schedules are intermittent, depending on accumulation of small orders. One effect of this condition is to divert some business from mills to warehouses. Jobbers are buying fairly well to meet this demand.

Some steelmakers find January orders slightly better than in December, part of this being attributable to moderate increase in automotive specifications, which are beginning to assume more importance.

Railroads offer little tonnage although small purchases of cars, rails and a few locomotives come out each week. Programs for the year are being held back until the rate situation is made definite. Every effort is being made by the interstate commerce commission to expedite hearings and arguments to the end that a decision may be made in February. Belief is that some measure of relief will be granted and considerable buying is expected to follow.

up a future tonnage of steel which will furnish a backlog over many months. In addition to craft already awarded to builders, who will start soon placing the steel with mills, a number of further projects are pending. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. will take bids next week on two tankers which will require about 10,000 tons of steel and bids will be opened Feb. 1 on the commission is about to award River Transportation.

River transportation interests are active in adding to facilities, one located at Pittsburgh having placed ten cargo barges and three fuel flats, requiring 2725 tons of steel. Bids will be taken next month on 22 open hopper barges and a wrought iron hull for a derrick boat for use on the Mississippi and its tributaries.

Continued slight increase in operations at important centers, with unchanged rates at others and only small recessions at two points have brought a net gain of 1.5 points in the national operating rate, to 30.5 per cent of capacity. In most cases expectation is for additional activity during the present week. Pittsburgh moved up 15 points to 26 per cent, Youngstown 3 points to 28, Chicago 1 point to 27.5, Wheeling 16 points to 31, Cleveland 2 points to 26 and Cincinnati 4 points to 32. The rate was unchanged at 31 per cent in Eastern Pennsylvania, 23 at Buffalo, 21 at St. Louis and 52 at Detroit. Birmingham receded 3 points to 60 per cent and New England 6 points to 20 per cent.

Curtail Production

As a partial offset to the gradual improvement in general buying of steel the agricultural implement industry is curtailing somewhat, a seasonal change. This industry has been one of the sustaining factors over the past several months and its defection is beginning to be felt. However, agricultural areas continue to prosper and renewed buying is expected to bring back production of farm tools shortly.

Automobile production held steady at 65,413, compared with 65,735 in the preceding week. General Motors assembled 21,920, compared with 22,160 the week before; Chrysler output was 11,800, against 13,975; Ford made no change at 22,763; independent builders produced 8933, compared with 6335 in the preceding period.

After a slow rise for seven weeks Steel's composite of steelmaking scrap prices last week paused and remained unchanged at $13.90. This is $1.15 higher than the low point at the end of November. Export demand in the East is a source of some strength and small offerings prevent a tooheavy market. Holders to a great extent are averse to releasing their material at the present level. The iron and steel composite is also unchanged at $38.97 and the finished steel composite at $61.70.

Because of competition by American steelmakers in world markets the European steel cartel has reduced prices of export steel by the amount added in May last year. General dullness of export demand is another factor in the decision to quote a lower range.

GAMES MONDAY NIGHT
Michigan at Ohio State.

BY EARL HILLIGAN
CHICAGO — The 1938 Big Ten basketball title race, which promised plenty of excitement during the pre-season campaign, isn't letting midwest court fans down.

With the race practically at the halfway post, the championship fight still is wide open, with any one of seven teams holding a chance of staging a winning streak to force ahead and further scramble the standings. Northwestern leads the pack with five wins and one defeat. Purdue in second place, has lost only once, and four teams — Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio State and Iowa, have only two setbacks on their records. Indiana, a club which always is dangerous, has lost three games in five starts — but it's too early to count the Hoosiers out.

None of the first four clubs in the standings has much of an edge in their approaching battles, so far as comparatively "easy" foes are concerned. Northwestern, which defeated Wisconsin, Indiana, Iowa, Ohio State and Michigan, must meet those teams again, in addition to Purdue, which handed the Wildcats their only defeat.

Here are future opponents of Purdue, Wisconsin and Michigan: Purdue-Indiana 2 games; Illinois, Ohio State 2, Wisconsin, Chicago and Northwestern; Wisconsin-Indiana 2, Northwestern, Chicago, Purdue, Michigan and Minnesota; Michigan-Ohio State, Iowa 2, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois and Northwestern.

Michigan Defeated
Northwestern clung to first place Saturday night by turning back Michigan 30 to 29. The Wildcats and Wolverines were tied 15-15 at the half, with Northwestern spurring in the closing minutes to gain a five point edge and then fighting off a desperate Michigan rally.

Ohio State, serving notice it is out to play a big part in the title decision business, trounced Illinois 46 to 26. The Buckeyes held Lewis Dehner, the conference high scorer, to seven points and won comfortably using numerous reserves in the second period.

The race slows down this week. Tonight's only conference game sends Michigan against Ohio State at Columbus. On Saturday night the only contest scheduled pits Chicago against Minnesota at Minneapolis.

Tops Little Chute Legion Team in 13 Games This Winter

Little Chute — Pete Wildenberg, forward on the Legion basketball team, is setting the scoring pace for his mates according to figures released today and not including yesterday's game in County league competition.

Wildenberg has counted 48 field goals and 11 free tosses for 107 points in 13 games against all opponents. His average is almost nine points a game. Tony Jansen, besides being outstanding at guard, also is showing a keen eye for the hoop and has counted 92 points on 42 field goals and 8 free throws.

Jansen has 22 fouls and is tied with Henry Bongard but his argument is a good guard has to foul.

The Chuters claimed 13 wins previous to Sunday. They have defeated Gords of Neenah, Town Tax, New London, County D, Black Creek, Seymour, Hortonville, Kaukauna, Wrightstown and Fox River Park.

The Chuters expect to meet Kimberly as soon as a suitable date can be arranged. The clubs are dickering for the first home date and a week when they aren't forced to meet another strong team before playing each other.

Little Chute would like to meet other valley teams and dates may be arranged by contacting Emil Van Dyke, manager.

The scoring statistics for the Chuters:

Kimberly Athletic Club Cagers Defeat Milwaukee Negro Team by 31-30 Score

KIMBERLY—The Kimberly A. cagers won their tenth consecutive victory Sunday by defeating the Panther Negro basketball team of Milwaukee, 31 to 30, in a thrilling game at the clubhouse.

The largest crowd of the season witnessed the tangle, filling the hall to capacity. The Panthers were well-pleased with the courtesy shown them and complimented the Papermakers on their good sportsmanship and stated that the A's were one of the fastest and best coached teams they have encountered this season. The Papermakers are claiming the Fox River valley championship.

Simons, tall center of the visitors, gave an exhibition of clever ball handling and fancy foot work. Dowell was the sharpshooter of his squad having five field goals to his credit.

Back LeMay took a pass from Bowman and made the first field goal. Joe Gossens immediately tossed one in the hoop on a sleeper play. With four minutes of the game gone Dowell made a field goal for the Panthers and Simons and Martin dropped buckets to take the lead with a score 6 to 4.

Walford was fouled and made good on his two gift shots. Bowman sank a field goal and Joe Gossens a free throw to keep the Papermakers in the running. Another field goal by Dowell and a gift shot by Simons for the visitors while N. Gossens added a free throw for the A's, ended the scoring in the first quarter with the count 11 to 8 for the Panthers.

The second quarter had both teams playing good ball with the Panthers and Papermakers each scoring six points as the half ended with the Milwaukeeans still leading, 17 to 14.

Kimberly Takes Lead
E. Vander Velden was fouled by Sherman and opened the third period with a gift shot followed by Bowman and LeMay with field goals. LeMay scored another bucket and Sherman of the visitor, made the only goal for his team in that quarter as the third frame ended with the home boys leading, 23 to 17.

Bowman got the tipoff in the fourth period and dribbled free to add two points for his team. E. Vander Velden found himself boxed in, but shot a nice goal from the free throw line. Simons and Dowell of the dark boys, by clever ball handling, scored two field goals and in addition Simons scored a free throw on a foul by N. Gossens to bring the score to 27 to 24 for the A's. Field goals by N. Gossens and E. Vander Velden of the Papermakers, with buckets by Dowell and Martin of the Panthers and two gift shots by Walford, had the teams

VIKINGS took lone possession of first place in the American division of the Older Boys league Saturday when they defeated the Buckeyes, 19-11. Both teams were undefeated previous to Saturday's game.

The Vikes had little trouble winning and Kliefoth, Burton and DeLong got baskets before the Buckeyes counted a point. The quarter ended 6-1, the half 9-3, and the third period 15-7. The winners' sharp breaks to the basket gave them a decided edge in play. Van Ryzin, Gertsch and Weisenberg showed well for the losers.

Bluebirds tied for second place with the Buckeyes with a 12-4 win over the Fords. The first quarter looked like a pitcher's battle and neither side got a point. In the second period both teams scored two field goals and the Fords were destined to get no more for the game. The third period saw the Birds get five points and lead 9-4 and then win 12-4. Pruett, Schroeder and Block looked best for the Birds, Filz, White and Freude for the Fords.

In the other battle the Red Wings tripped the Post Hi-Y, 21 to 6. The Red Wings built up a 6 to 0 lead in the first quarter but it was only 6 to 4 at the half. In the third quarter the margin was 10 to 6 and the final period saw the Reds count 11 points while holding the Post team scoreless.

Duane and Gene Langdon and Glen Schwere performed best for the Red Wings while Olson and Leisinger did well for Post Hi-Y.

Chicago Baseball Official Is Dead

Diamond World Mourns Passing of Cubs Vice President

Chicago — The baseball world today mourned the passing of another pioneer in the game, John O. Seys, who was with the Chicago Cubs 21 years. For the past 11 years he had been vice president of the National league team.

Seys died last night in a hospital of pneumonia. He would have been 67 years old next April.

Seys started his baseball career as a member of the Chicago Daily News staff, on which he served 16 years.

In 1917 Seys became a member of the Cubs' executive staff, working under William Wrigley, Jr. He served as traveling secretary until the close of the 1926 season, when the post was taken by Robert Lewis, present road secretary. He was promoted to the vice presidency of the club in 1927, the post he held until his death.

He is survived by the widow and a daughter.

Bernard Mack, of Beaver Dam, won the intermediate boys' title.

Doris Tetzlaff, of Oconomowoc, took three events in the intermediate girls' section, and Larry Spry, of St. John's academy, Delfield, Wis., won the junior boys' title.

Betty Burr, of Madison, took both events in the junior girls, and Edward Dobbratz, of Oconomowoc, topped the juvenile boys championship.

Lawrence Drops Close One, 31-29

Lake Forest Goes Ahead In Last 3 Minutes To Cop

Lake Forest, Ill.,—Coming from behind in the last three minutes of play the Lake Forest college Jaybirds moved out the invading Lawrence college Vikings Saturday evening, 31-29.

Leading 16-14 at the half, Lawrence went ahead 18-14 as Master-son counted from under the hoop. Bob Sticks scored for the Foresters and Schuess dropped a field goal for Lawrence making the score 20-16. Jackson boosted the Viking lead to six points and Sticks and Patterson hit for the Jaybirds under the basket shots to make the score 22-20 with Lawrence leading. Buesing and Patterson scored for their respective teams and Bob Petersen dropped a free toss to narrow the Lawrence lead to one point 24-23. Cape and Burton hit on free throws and again Bob Petersen dropped a field goal, this time from the far out on the floor. Burton sank another free throw putting Lawrence in the lead 27-25.

Lake Forest knotted the count for the first time in the second half as Patterson, substitute Jaybird forward, sank a long arching toss from the center of the floor. At this point, with but three minutes left to play, the action increased. Bob Petersen sank a long field goal and Maiman sank a long push shot from the side for Lake Forest. Burton dropped two free throws to bring the score to 31-29 as the game ended.

The first half was slow with neither team hitting consistently. Lake Forest got off to a lead with McAllister and Petersen scoring and Lawrence tied the count at 4 apiece as Cape and Falcide scored. From this point neither team lead by more than three points until the half.

The lineups:

Lake Forest	Lawrence
Boyle	G.T.P.
Petersen	1

Distance Events Get Top Billing at Two Indoor Meets

New York—(U)—The indoor track season, after three weeks of undistinguished racing, moves into the first major competition of the campaign Saturday at Boston, with the running of the annual Prout Memorial mile of the Massachusetts Knights of Columbus.

Top billing for the games, which will be followed a week later by the Millrose meet here, goes to the mile and the two-mile runs. These popular events have drawn Glenn Cunningham, Archie San Romani and Gene Venzke in the mile and Don Lash, Floyd Lechner, Jimmy Decker, Ray Sears and the veteran Ole McCuskey in the two-miles.

Cunningham and San Romani, the two transplanted Kansans, should dominate the mile. Glenn has a 1:32 outdoor mile for the Sugar bowl meet to his credit and Saturday night won his first indoor mile at the annual meet of the Grover Cleveland-Oscola club.

San Romani has been inconsistent. He beat Lash to set an American record at 3,000 meters and then was beaten in a three-quarter mile run.

British Golfer Regaining Form

Tolley Good Enough to Pick Walker Team but Can't Play on It

London—(U)—Cyril James Hastings Tolley is a little thinner on the top and thicker in the middle than he has been in the past, but his 1929 putting touch and the way over here are saying "Look out!" and sometimes "Beware!"

This rejuvenation of the 42-year-old Tolley has caused general rejoicing and some embarrassment. The rejoicing is being done by those British observers who notice and admit that there isn't a real "world amateur" in the British Isles today. The embarrassment is limited to the Royal and Ancient Golf association which decided Tolley was good enough to pick the British Walker cup team, but not good enough to play on it.

Under present rules of the R. and A., those who pick cannot play. No member of the selection committee is eligible for the team.

Since the rule was passed, Cyril James has been knocking off the leading candidates as if he were a member of the American Walker cup team.

Thomson led the par busters in yesterday's third round with a 64, seven under par, to take a one-stroke advantage over Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., who lost control of the play with a 71. Thomson's 54-hole total was 69-73-64—206.

Three players started four strokes back of Thomson today—Olin Dutra, Los Angeles; Johnny Revolta, Portland, Ore.; and Al Zimmerman, Alvin Krueger, of Beloit, carried a 73 in the third round yesterday. Added to this total for the first two rounds, Krueger had a total of 215 strokes, nine behind the leader, Jimmy Thomson.

Baugh Leads Team to Victory Over Chicago

Dallas—(U)—If Sammy Baugh hasn't signed his contract with the Washington Redskins, pro football champions, he has an extra headache to slip into salary bickering with owner George Marshall.

Yester day he triple-threatened Washington to a smashing 13-0 triumph here over the team which owner Marshall really likes to conquer—the burly Chicago Bears.

Baugh's intimates said he had not yet signed a contract. Earlier in the week the Sweetwater, Texas, pigskin pitcher said he would ask for a three-year agreement.

Baugh passed for one touchdown against the Bears, rolled up an amazing 48 yard kicking average, ran wild on several ground gains and dropped cold any Chicago running threat that came his direction.

BASKETBALL By CHARLES R. (CHICK) DAVIES Duquesne University Coach

A COACH'S PSYCHOLOGY CAN SPUR TEAM TO HEIGHTS Coach Davies Reveals Help Manhattan College Gave His Team on Its Eastern Trip

I N recent years sports writers have stressed the application of psychology in various fields of athletic endeavor. Reams of copy were devoted to that great student and master psychologist, Knute Rockne, Notre Dame's immortal grid mentor. His skillful employment of psychological twists served to turn many apparent defeats into victories, giving the impression that football was the most fertile field for psychological pressure. While football is a strenuous game, grid coaches do not contend with the wear and tear that a basketball mentor encounters during the course of a season.

Basketball aggregations play approximately three times as many games as the football eleven in the same period of time, ten weeks. Keeping the team at the constant high peak several times a week is a most arduous task. The basketball coach must be able to discern the various moods of his players and keep them in an enjoyable frame of mind through the lengthy practice sessions and weeks of competition. He is a taskmaster, companion and confidant. His players' troubles are his own. He shares their joys and suffers their sorrows.

Our Inspired Jews In several instances victories and the development of star performers can be directly attributed to a psychological measure.

Back in 1928 Duquesne made its first extensive road trip. Prior to our game with City College in New York, Manhattan College graciously invited us to rest in the school dormitory. Before the boys were awakened I instructed several hanger-ons to spur the team on by cheering them as we departed. I was particularly eager for the Manhattanites to arouse the Dukes to a fighting pitch. Inasmuch as Manhattan and City College are strong traditional rivals, anyway, the Kelly Green jerseys were unusually eager to see us win. As we departed several of our hosts admonished us to whip out of the dormitory. One lad who had received specific instructions from me, piped up, "now, go down there and show those Jewish boys how basketball should be played."

The utterance had the desired effect. Two of my stalwarts, of Jewish extraction, Eddie Losman and Jack Rosenberg were so enraged at the palpable fraud that they single-handedly defeated a great C. C. N. Y. five. An insight on how well known Duquesne was at that time is gleaned from the fact that Nat Holman, City mentor, did not attend the game. He never repeated the mistake.

In the fall of 1931 I enrolled as a student at the University. During the ensuing four years I had ample opportunity to study the players in classrooms, assemblies and locker rooms, thereby enabling me to interpret their foods, attitudes and actions on the gym floor. By a strange quirk of fortune the team that represented Duquesne during my period of matriculation was the finest I ever coached. In Marty Reiter, diminutive guard, we had a sterling team player and Polly Birch, now with the Original Celtics, was the best all-around competitor ever to matriculate at Duquesne.

Our center during that period was tall, slender Irv Brenner, a shy, retiring boy who lacked confidence in his own ability. I was sorely pined at times with this lad, as he was potentially as good as any center that ever trod a college board. Private talks and coaxing were to no avail. His smoldering attitude could not be shaken. In desperation I called a meeting of the most prominent students in college to help inspire the likeable center. We decided on a whispered speaking campaign to spread the word around the classrooms that "Coach Davies had stated in private conversation that Irv Brenner had it in him to become the greatest college center in the country."

It was only a matter of time before the gossip reached Brenner's ears. The next game uncovered a new Brenner. From a retiring individual, the metamorphosis produced

Waner Wins Golf Tournament for Baseball Players

Sarasota, Fla.—(U)—Paul Waner, Pittsburgh outfielder, was baseball's champion golfer.

The elder of the Waner brothers defeated Jack Russell, former American league pitcher, 6 and 5, to win the annual baseball players golf tournament here yesterday.

Established as the pre-tourney favorite in the players' auction, Waner played a consistent par game in the 36-hole final.

Joe Medwick, national league batting champion and St. Louis Cardinal outfielder, gave the one and only Jerome Herman Dean a neat demonstration of his golfing prowess in annexing second flight honors. Medwick not only whalloped his teammate, 6 and 5, but rifled a shot 277 yards down the fairway to cop the driving contest.

Jo Jo White of Detroit took third flight honors, turning back Henie Manush, Brooklyn veteran, one up.

For Dean, the tournament proved an expensive affair. Checking up, the Cardinal pitcher said he lost a total of $1,550 in bets. Failure to qualify for the first flight, "Ole Dix" said, cost him $1,000 wagered against $20,000 with an undisclosed party.

What A Battle Folks! History tells how snow and cold defeated Napoleon in Russia. But Colonel 'Wild Phil's' Blue Army took today's weather as their ally. Under cover of the blizzard this morning they un-natched the cold steel of their bayonets after a forced march through the cold snow, took the Red Army by storm in a surprise attack, during which they captured ten more used car and truck buyers. This 'battle of the drifts' gives the Blue Army a slight lead over General Brandt's Red Legions in the war for the hearts and minds of the people. The shooting was over at 11:00 A.M. and the soldiers are now resting the workmen's values are shown below. To remain their lost lead.

No Warning Given Oil Men That Law Was Being Broken

Originally Acted Upon Encouragement of Ickes, Lawrence Says

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Washington — Any business man who goes to Washington to discuss economic recovery and who mentions a proposal that relates in any way to prices does so at his own peril. He may find himself in jail later on, not withstanding the fact that he may be encouraged by the president of the United States or by any member of his cabinet to formulate such a plan and put it into operation.

This inference may readily be drawn from the amazing set of circumstances that surrounds the conviction of 16 oil companies and 30 of their officers by a grand jury in Madison, Wisconsin, on a technicality under the Sherman Anti-Trust law relating to price-fixing. What the oil men did, they did originally under the encouragement of the department of the interior, presided over by Secretary Harold Ickes. Everything that the oil executives did was known to the federal government prior to June, 1935, when the first complaint was lodged with the department of justice—this was a month after the NRA codes were invalidated by the supreme court.

Not a single statement that the oil men were violating the anti-trust laws or warning to stop was given by the department of the interior, with which they were cooperating earnestly to stabilize price wars in the oil fields. A letter, which is now a matter of public record, was written by Secretary Ickes to the oil men which advised them frankly to cut out the price wars and get together.

Department at Odds
The gossip is that the interior department and the department of justice have been for several months at loggerheads over the case and that Secretary Ickes recently placed at the disposal of the defense counsel in Madison all the records and data that he could without himself becoming involved as a partisan of the defense cause.

There's one man who knows more about the legal aspects of this whole proceeding from the standpoint of what the oil executives did than anybody else in the picture, and he is Charles Fahy, now general counsel for the National Labor Relations board, but previous to that assignment, he was counsel for the petroleum administrative board, created in the interior department by Mr. Ickes to handle the oil problem. Next to him, Secretary Ickes can speak—the public is entitled to know their views on this strange proceeding, though courtesy to another government department probably will keep them silent.

The oil executives had no intention of violating any law. Certainly today, as they and their families bear the odium of publicity given to convictions in a federal court, it is a far cry from the spirit and atmosphere which prevailed when they sat down with Mr. Fahy and government officials to work out and adjust the situation in what was then described as the marketing of "distress" gasoline.

Fair Play
If these executives have violated the law on a technicality, and their counsel tried strenuously to prove to the jury that it was not even a technical violation, the question of fair play arises, because the department of justice and the department of interior are both directly responsible to President Roosevelt, and he could have reconciled the differences between these departments and settled the case without allowing technicalities to rule. Certainly, the president had an opportunity, ever since the date of indictments—December, 1936—to eliminate the criminal proceedings against the individuals and let the effort to enjoin the oil companies through civil proceedings be the way of bringing about an adjustment of the conflicting issues.

But the president did not do so. He permitted the indictments to be brought and to stand against men who cooperated with his own administration. Under such circumstances, does any business man in America today dare to take the risk of that informal cooperation which might be called price mediation or price adjustment in conference with government officials? Not long ago, Mr. Roosevelt proposed such a plan at his press conference.

Business men will look askance now at any such conferences, for they may lay themselves open to possible criminal indictments. Even the assurance by a cabinet officer or a government department that there will be no prosecution apparently cannot be accepted as a guarantee of immunity.

Immunity Assurance
The only assurance of immunity that a citizen may really rely upon are those in which he violates the Federal Corrupt Practices act by purchasing Democratic campaign books with the president's autograph thereon. This is a plain violation of the law, but the department of justice, with the approval of President Roosevelt, will condone these so-called "technical" violations because they bring money into the Democratic campaign chest. No more flagrant case of immorality in the conduct of government could be cited; but not a single indictment has ever been brought.

So far as principle is concerned, there isn't the slightest difference between one federal law and any other. The violator can be hauled before a grand jury and, after a case as prepared by aggressive government prosecutors who narrow the issue to a technicality, the jury has no choice but to listen to the charge that a law has actually been violated. They cannot take into account all the extenuating circumstances surrounding the cooperation of government and business which the department of interior encouraged, for instance, in respect to the oil industry. The jury can only look at the law literally and the evidence literally.

Proof of this attitude can be gotten from reading the proceedings on the long struggle which the oil defense had in trying to get into the record a copy of the Ickes letter. Government counsel fought this strenuously—they didn't want the jury to consider anything but the technical result of the work of the committee of business men appointed originally at the behest of the department of the interior.

Won't Know Rules
Surely, business progress will not be helped by what has happened, because business men can rightfully say they do not know what the rules are. The anti-trust laws have been variously interpreted by judicial decisions and by the department of justice itself.

It will be recalled that Colonel

William J. Donovan, hero of the "fighting 69th" in the World war, who was chief counsel for the oil men, was an assistant attorney general in the department of justice a decade ago, and he advocated a policy of letting business men come to the department, state frankly what they planned to do, and learn whether what they had in mind was a violation of law.

This policy was never accepted by the succeeding administrations. So a business man who wants to comply with the laws on the exchange of information relative to existing surpluses or on market conditions does not know how far he really can go, and the only way he can find out is to take a risk—and, if it lands him in jail, well, the government says, "It's just too bad, we can't help it."

The manifest unfairness of such tactics is not a stimulus to public confidence nowadays in time of business recession. The business man who goes to Washington to talk with any government officials, therefore, should familiarize himself, or through his attorneys, with what happened in the oil cases if he wants to keep his family name from being besmirched by a possible conviction in a federal court which usually takes years to erase. And when innocence of criminal wrongdoing is finally established, the long interval in between has usually done damage to individual reputations that is beyond repair.

Every time I glanced at him his blank expression forced a chuckle out of me—he seemed so disarmed, so unaccustomedly at a loss.

He paid no attention to me. His eyes would shift from Christine Forrester to her brother Robert, a slim sun-red young man with a high-bridged nose and blonde hair smoothly combed. Robert Forrester had much too controlled a face for James Clyde to appraise immediately. Whenever my uncle tried that, his glance would shear off from young Forrester after a moment or two, as from a closed door that refuses to budge, although its knob turns smoothly round and round.

'A Dangerous Place'
Then my uncle would look at the squat, heat-puffed figure of the Avon's sailing master, Marvin Stocker. Old Captain Stocker's eyes were bright and bulgy with fever; and finding him hopelessly sick and stolid, Clyde would be forced back to Robert Forrester again.

"I can't understand," James Clyde said slowly, "why I can't seem to explain this to you. I am trying to tell you that you've anchored in a much more dangerous place than you realize."

Robert Forrester would have had a right to resent that. To "come" to a dangerous place may imply purpose and courage, but merely to "anchor" in one plainly suggests the fat-headedness it was a weakness of Clyde's to say too often exactly what he meant.

Young Forrester, however, showed no irritation. But I could sense a slowly thickening British stubbornness behind his manner of faintly resentful politeness.

He said now, "I should imagine we will be quite all right."

"That's exactly what you should not imagine," Clyde told him.

Yet it was easy enough to see, in a way, what persuaded Robert Forrester to this sense of security. He and his sister were sitting on their own ship's deck with their own things around them, the civilized intimacies of their own people. For, remember, the Avon was no tropic trading schooner.

The afterdeck awning, covering the whole semi-circular sweep of the poop, was permanent, of wood. It was a luxury, all right. Coarse screens of finely split bamboo were made fast around the rail, reeved on the shade side, but let down to kill the glare of the sun side. With canvas chairs and some little teak-wood tables set out there, it was nothing like the poop of a ship at all, but more like the veranda of some club, overhanging the water.

And now tea things were set out on the little tables. There were thin China cups, and a long-spouted silver teapot and pitcher steeply cantered on their bases as they were made by the silver worker, of India. When I looked at those things I didn't believe in Dyaks myself, though I suppose I have seen hundreds of thousands.

'A Big Boil-up'
"But I am trying to tell you," Clyde was insisting, "that you are absolutely not all right. I've been in these islands for 10 years, and I've never heard so many drums and gongs together in one place. There's smoke hanging over the jungle along a shoreline of eight miles. You're anchored hard against a big boil-up of Dyak tribes on the wild loose, at war. If you have eyes and ears at all your should know that."

Robert Forrester said with reserve, "I hardly think they're out after us."

"And I'm trying to explain to you that that makes no difference," Clyde kept on, grave and patient. "When a Dyak war party turns loose they'll raid and loot and pirate anything that they can handle and there are enough of them across the bay to tackle a first class sloop of war. My vessel is easily three or four times stronger than yours; yet I tell you that I wouldn't rest here five minutes if I didn't have definite business that forces me to."

Robert Forrester turned and looked across the water at Clyde's three-master, the Linkang. She was a converted whaler, bluff and high in the counters. She carried as heavy an armament as her crew could man—two three-pounders each at stern and bow—not heavy guns, but big enough to knock a prau out of the water—and a long six-pound swivel mounted amidships, where the tryworks had been. She was by no means safe in Baligong bay, but she represented all the precautions we could reasonably take. Robert Forrester, though, did not seem to like the comparison. I thought he was about to dispute the matter with my uncle, but he did not.

Instead, he spoke with an unmisgiving air of summing up the situation before dismissing us. "I've already told you, Captain Clyde, that we also have important business here. As I mentioned before, it's our intention to trade for pearls. We came here for that purpose, and we expect to remain here until it is carried out."

Plainly, my uncle wanted to swear at him, but he held himself back. "Think what is likely to happen to you," he urged. "It's a wonder to me that they haven't swarmed over you already."

"They are scarcely alone in that," said the blonde young man suavely.

My uncle passed over it. "You can't count on them—not even for one more night. There must be enough war praus in the Siderong to cover this bay like a mat. If a single Dyak chief sends out his praus, just to look you over, the rest will turn it into a race for the loot. When that happens, nothing under heaven can save you."
